To Kill or Not to Kill

Paderewski Still Practices

Your Rich Relative

The Host Coat

By Arthur Brisbane

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 6—While Governor Brucker signs a bill to re-establish capital punishment in Michigan, California discusses, and will adopt, it is hoped, a bill abolishing capital punishment.

The state cannot discourage murder by imitating murders, and killing as they kill.

Instead of death, the extreme penalty should be life imprisonment, and it should mean LIFE IMPRISONMENT with eight hours for work, eight hours for sleep, eight hours for regret and reflection.

Two criminals recently received sentences aggregating more than 200 years, and it was announced officially that they would actually stay in jail about 14 years. That makes a joke of justice.

The one "secret of success" is work.

Paderewski, in his private car on a sidetrack in Los Angeles, amazed railroad workers by practicing for hours on the piano that he carries with him. One worker remarked, "They say he's the best piano player in the world, and listen to him, still practicing." That is one reason why he is the best player in the world. The other reason is his possession of genius.

But even genius, without work, as proved by the careers of many brilliant men born rich, is genius wasted.

It is a comfort to have rich relatives even when you feel poor, and the nation's Uncle Sam is rich. He has in solid gold four billion, five hundred and ninety million dollars, within one hundred millions of the greatest amount he ever had.

With such a gold supply it is hard to understand why such a fuss should be made about the soldiers' bonus.

But everything about finance is hard to understand.

Fashionable tailors in New York exhibit what they call "host coats." Brightly colored, blue with green lapels, or wine colored with red lapels, they allow the eaters and drinkers at the party to pick out the man who is paying the bills and prevent mistaking him for the butler.

The latter advantage is not important, because the butler may usually be recognized by his expression of concentrated intelligence, and is nearly always sober.

Herbert Swope had this "host coat" idea, long ago, wearing an evening suit of beautiful claret colored damask.

Why, no one knew. In his house there can't be any mistake about the host. And the butler had nothing to do with it, for Swope's servants are black.

A new name, marihuana, has been added to the list of deadly drugs that form a habit, and stupefy the nerves. This news interests the general public, for marihuana, "touched up with a bit of cocaine" makes the criminal, according to Admiral Hobson, "a desperate man, without pity or fear."

There are some things worse even than whiskey.

It is pleasing to know that France, Italy and other European countries probably will not fight for some time.

It would be more pleasing, and matter for congratulation to all of our states, if we knew that we were thoroughly prepared, regardless of what France, Italy or any other nation might do.

In opening bids on the Boulder Dam the government was surprised to find that Six Companies, Inc., of San Francisco, had won the general contract for dam, power plant and appurtenant work with a bid of only $48,890,955, many millions below the government estimate. The work will start in 30 days.

When it is finished, on the theory that the people and the government can spend money, but can't manage a business, the property will be turned over for exploitation to private individuals that can manage a business.

The "utility" stocks, that distribute light, power, etc., were cheerful as "strong" in yesterday's dull market. A formal statement from the White House that the government must not go into business for itself encouraged the power stock bunnies.

It is reassuring to know that you can exploit the people's necessities and natural monopolies without any danger of competition from their government.

Coast Guard Cutter Steams to Aid Crew of 15 Aboard the Shawmut

Fifteen Boston fishermen, aboard a disabled trawler, battled against death in mountainous seas today aboard the steam trawler Shawmut, 150 miles east of Boston.

Their plight was radioed coast guard headquarters here by the trawler Sea and the coast guard cutter Agassiz was dispatched to aid the men.

Little detail was given in the message from Capt. Frank Bruce of the Sea, but it indicated efforts of the Sea's crew to aid the Shawmut were meeting with little success.

The Shawmut left the Fish pier last Monday for a trip to South Channel fishing grounds and is believed to have been headed for port when disabled.

A message from the Agassiz to coast guard headquarters stated she was full steam ahead in raging

Wales Stirs Ire of Buenos Aires Crowd

Buenos Aires, March 6 (AP)—Buenos Aires gave the Prince of Wales and his brother George one of the warmest receptions of their career, but it was the warmth of a broiling sun rather than that of an enthusiastic public manifestation.

Thousands turned out to greet the two princes when they arrived, but the British heir, tired from a ride in an open plane, hurried through the formalities of reception and appeared to have antagonized the crowds which had waited for him in the sun.

Threats Sent Film Director Milestone

Hollywood, Cal., March 6 (AP)—Lewis Milestone, director of "Two Arabian Knights," "New York Nights" and other motion pictures, was guarded by sheriff's deputies today after receipt of letters threatening his life.

Milestone said the letters were from a man he had known in boyhood in Russia and who recently met him here, demanding large sums of money.

Radium Death Suit Settled for $3000

Newark, N. J., March 6 (AP)—A $3000 settlement of Dominick Stasi's suit against the United States Radium Corporation for the death of his wife, Anna, former employe and the 18th alleged victim of radium poisoning, has been disclosed in the surrogate's office here.

Other similar suits for damages totalling $800,000 are pending against the radium company.

YOUTH NEAR COLLAPSE AS HOPE FADES FOR VICTIM

Chums Ready to Raise a Defense Fund; Police Check Up on Burglaries

Haverhill, March 6—"Mrs. Ellis' death may be expected any hour," hospital officials stated at noon today. "Everything possible is being done, but the patient does not respond to emergency treatment."

By a Staff Correspondent.

Haverhill, March 6—Formation of a "secret defense committee" by a group of high school seniors, to aid in defending Russell Noble, 17, alleged attacker of Mrs. Clara E. Ellis, was revealed today by one of the boys, as the victim lay near death.

These schoolboys are doing everything possible as amateur detectives to uncover information of value to the defense and to combat rumors and gossip about the case.

The authorities feared the complete collapse of young Noble, following a sleepless night in his cell at Lawrence.

He tossed on his cot all night long, according to officials of the county jail, expecting to hear the worse from Benson Hospital, where Mrs. Ellis is losing her battle for life, according to reports.

Changing sentiment among the high school pupils, who were at first practically unanimous in believing Noble innocent, led to the defense committee, it was disclosed.

WIDOW IS VERY LOW

"The idea started when a lot of people up at school began turning against Russell," said the member who revealed the committee's existence.

"That made us mad and we banded together. We've held several meetings. Another thing, we want to fight the rumors and gossip that have been going around. We know Russell was O. K.

"No defense fund is being raised just now, as far as we know, but if there is one we'll help get it up, and I think everybody in school will chip in, no matter what they believe."

For the jailed boy and others, the doctors, consulting today at the police's behest, held out no hope for her recovery. She was

4 HELD IN 'PUPIL SLAVE RING'

With revelations yesterday of traffic in young girls by an alleged South Boston vice ring and the conviction of a young Lynn matron on charge of maintaining a resort patronized by Lynn school children, police and social workers today were delving deeper into Greater Boston's outcropping of sordid "white slave" activities.

Four men, seized by police of City Point station after they had been named by a group of grammar school girls as their attackers, were held to the grand jury today in bonds of $4000 each.

DOZEN GIRLS INVOLVED

They are Michael Mangiatordi, 49, of Washington ave., South Boston, father of six children; Nicola Frudente, 48, of Sherwood st., Roxbury, also married; George Carle, 31, West Broadway, and Ernest Willis, 35, of Gates st., South Boston.

At least a dozen girl students of the Shurtleff school, Dorchester st., South Boston, were victimized by the men, according to stories told the police by the girls, who appeared at the hearing before Judge William Day in the South Boston Municipal Court.

The girls range I nage between 11 and 16 years. One is alleged to have acted as "agent" for the ring furnishing recruits, for which she was paid 15 cents apiece.

Man Held in Hammer 'Scare'

Lawrence, March 6—Not to be outdone by Haverhill, this city had its own hammer scare today.

It came with the arrest of William E. Lacey, 54, who gave a New York address, but is well known to police here. He was taken from a Tremont st. rooming house, where, police say, he was hiding under a bed clutching a hammer.

His presence was reported by Mrs. Elsie Ordway, a roomer, at the house, under whose bed Lacey was found.

The latter told police he had been keeping company with Mrs. Ordway and was going to satisfy himself regarding rumors he had heard.

Mississippi Valley Swept by Blizzard

Kansas City, March 6 (AP)—A March snowstorm, praised by wheat farmers, feared by cattlemen, swept into the western fringe of Mississippi Valley States today from the Rockies. A brisk northwest wind bore the storm upon Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa, while its approach was heralded variously in other states of the region by rains, cloudy skies and falling temperatures. In Wyoming the blizzard left a heavy blanket of snow.

GENERAL ALARM HAVERHILL FIRE

Haverhill, March 6—A series of gasoline tank explosions endangered firemen early today in a Maple st. garage fire that destroyed 12 trucks at a loss of $20,000.

Investigation of the blaze was started immediately on the story that several youths were seen near the building just before the fire started.

Thirteen of the trucks were owned by E. Zarbas & Co., fruit dealers, and the other two by Carbone Fruit Co., both of Winter st.

Fire apparatus called on a general alarm faced a stubborn blaze, but firemen managed to confine it to the big wooden building.

HAMMER BOY COLLAPSES AS HOPE FOR HIS VICTIM FADES

WIDOW LOSES GROUND IN HER FIGHT FOR LIFE

too weak for the blood transfusion which was planned for this afternoon.

"I hope for the sake of both of us that she gets better," young Noble, who faces a murder charge if the widow dies, said to the guard who took breakfast to him.

Mrs. Ellis today had lost ground steadily for more than 24 hours. During the night she was seized with choking spells. She was unable to take any nourishment.

"Very low" was the report from the doctors, repeated again and again, as the hours and her life slipped away.

CHECK-UP ON BURGLARIES

Recent unskilled burglaries were checked up today by city and state police to determine whether Russell Noble, "model boy" who is alleged to have confessed to the hammer assault on Mrs. Ellis, was implicated in them.

Authorities say the high school Adonis may have started his career as an amateur crackaman earlier than he admitted. In his alleged statement to the police, he is said to have claimed that the night of the assault, February 26, was the only time he had ever been guilty of breaking and entering.

Several other breaks are said to appear similar to Noble's unsuccessful attempt to force his way into the home of Miss Zoe Day at 42 Summer st., a block away from the Ellis mansion.

NEW DISCLOSURES

That Russell Noble suddenly developed inclinations strange for a boy of his exemplary reputation, appears to be substantiated by morals of evidence hourly cropping out.

His complaint of feeling tired out, his falling off in studies, and his craving for excitement and entertainment all denote a change which the police are inquiring into with the utmost care.

NO LOOT IN HOME

They say Russell's statement may be true, but they are resolved to satisfy their suspicions if possible. A secret reason for searching the boy's room in the home of his aunt on South Chestnut st., Bradford, was to see if it contained any loot.

The records in the city clerk's office show that Russell Borns Noble was born Oct. 18, 1913, father, Charles B. Noble, manufacturer, born in Nova Scotia; mother, Cora L. Burns, born in New Brunswick.

The Noble family was living at 86 Portland st., Haverhill, at the time.

The date, March 11, to which Russell Noble's case was continued, is the date of the death of his father, March 11, 1926.

While the officers searched for blood-stained clothing, they also kept their eyes peeled for money. They found neither, according to information available today.

Officials differ as to the attempted break in the old Day mansion. Some contend that it was the work of a beginner, while others take the opposite view.

BALKED BY WINDOW

The boy, according to the police, said he tried to force a window of the back porch. They say he told them he cracked the window pane near the center window fastener, an old-fashioned one, and unclasped it, only to find that the window was equipped with two additional fasteners.

Both of these were found unlocked by police, having been left that way or unlocked by the boy, but the tall old window refused to budge. Then the boy, according to his alleged confession, tried to force it with an implement which left slight marks on the sash.

Entry into the Day mansion might have meant a haul, because Miss Day has been absent since she was sent to Danvers Hospital four months ago. A relative on the other side of the double mansion has also been away for some time.

The police claim that Noble, while delivering newspapers, could have posted himself as to the layout of houses in the fashionable Highland section, and learn the habits of the occupants.

HOUSE HAS HISTORY

In selecting the Day mansion, Noble revived historical memories. Major Luther Day, a Civil War veteran, lived on one side of the mansion that is now owned by his daughter, Zoe Day, and the Major's brother, George W. Day, occupied the other half.

George "Chick" Day, Jr., son of the Major's brother, was a star pitcher at Exeter and later an athlete at Harvard. He and two others painted the status of John Harvard a bright crimson after a football game, according to articles published some time ago.

"Chick" Day, after numerous escapades, joined the Marines under the name of John Adams and won the Congressional medal in the World War for conspicuous gallantry in the second battle of the Marne. Not until after his death from wounds received in action was his true identity established. Boston and local newspapers carried the odd World War story of "Chick" Day of Haverhill.

The hammer tragedy presents a striking coincidence in that the Ellis mansion, the Day mansion, Benson Hospital, where Mrs. Ellis has lain unconscious since the attack, the high school, where Noble was a senior, and the public library where he made copious notes about the crime in preparation for writing a mystery story, are all on Summer st., within two blocks.

NO CLUES IN CLOTHES

Dr. Timothy Leary, medical examiner of Boston, to whom the clothing worn by the accused boy on the night of the attack was sent for chemical analysis, is reported to have found no traces of blood. Police thought the light suit and leather jacket would have been blood spattered, as was the bed and other articles in Mrs. Ellis' bedroom.

Police believe that Earl Turner, classmate of young Noble, is in error in saying the accused boy returned from a dance at Lawrence only an hour or two before the attack on Mrs. Ellis.

Turner got this information indirectly, being with Noble when a girl talked of the dance, and the investigators think it must have taken place Tuesday night, instead of Wednesday.

They are still seeking the other boy and the two girls who accompanied Noble to the dance, however, in the hope that valuable information may be gained from them. Turner's attitude in that his chum could not have been guilty of such a crime as the one charged against him.

Noble appears to have attended more dances of late than was his custom. He has been a patron of night dinners and cafes. Those who served him said he was unusually fond of toasted muffins. There were times when he was "broke." On such occasions he "chalked it on the cuff" but always paid later.

But his habits cost money and his pay as newsboy was only $3.50 a week and he picked up only a few extra dollars working for the florist, Brackett.

BOUGHT OWN CLOTHING

Russell paid for his own clothes and always dressed neatly. He was proud of his appearance. No boy in high school was more smartly dressed. His aunt and grandmother are said to have given him board and lodgings free.

Until recently he never complained about shortage of money, but one of the first things he is said to have admitted to the police when he surrendered Mrs. Ellis' wrist watch was that he was "dead broke."

In the light of late disclosures, including his trip to Lawrence to a dancing party with a chum and two Lawrence girls, his night lunches and other expenditures, the police feel that Russell's story that he turned burglar in desperation to raise $18 to pay for graduation photographs and wipe out a $6.50 deficit in his class fund did not cover his financial difficulties.

4 HELD IN PUPIL VICE RING

gation revealed that the ring's early activities were conducted in a West Broadway house, where one of the men in custody was employed as janitor.

Later, police said, the scene of operations was moved to a shack in East Second st.

Here, it is alleged, the small girls were taken, lured by stories told them by one of their slightly older companions of gifts of money and trinkets offered by the men.

Besides the four men in custody, police believe the children were attacked by other men. In court today, Special Officers J. E. Howard and Joseph L. Barrett declared they were positive an older person was implicated in the ring as go-between.

In an interview today, Miss Rosalie Carrigan, principal of the Shurtleff school, told of questioning two of the girls under her charge who are involved in the expose. One of them, she said, came from a home where a widowed mother supported a large family.

LYNN BRIDE FINED.

The three girls in her school whom she knows to be involved are all below the average mentally, she said.

Mrs. Frances Bennett, 21, bride of a year, and J. Verney White were arraigned in Lynn District Court today as a result of charges that high school boys and girls of tender age were using her house as a rendezvous for drinking parties.

Mrs. Bennett and White were fined $50 each after they pleaded guilty. Police told of a long surveillance of her house in Washington st., during which they gathered evidence of juvenile liquor parties and immoral conditions among school children who were Mrs. Bennett's guests.

Mrs. Bennett pleaded guilty to maintaining a disorderly house.

Deputy Sheriff Will Rule Norwell When State Police Go

If John Osborn, deputy sheriff, chief of police and, in fact, the complete municipal law enforcement agency in Norwell, has been shining up the brass buttons of his uniform there would seem to be every bit of justification for it.

All of which means that the State police barracks of Troop D1, subvisition of Middleboro, is scheduled to move out of Norwell and establish news quarters, probably in Pembroke, with the result that Osborn once again will soon come into his own.

'ADVISING' OF JURY MAY FREE 15 IN FAILURE

Atty.-Gen. Warner Silent on Proposed Motions of Defense Counsel

Because a prosecutor from the attorney-general's office had "advised" the Suffolk grand jury that they should not indict James M. Swift, former attorney-general, and Edmund Talbot, a widely known Boston attorney, more than 30 indictments returned in the probe of the $8,000,000 collapse of the New England Investors Shares, Inc., may be quashed.

The indictments against Swift and Talbot were not pressed by Atty-Gen. Joseph E. Warner, who said that the grand jury was not justified in returning indictments against them and that the jurors had been so advised.

DEFENSE PLAN BARED

When four prominent defendants were arraigned before Judge Harold P. Williams in superior criminal court, it became known that the attorney of one was planning to ask the court to quash the indictments as far as his client was concerned, because a prosecutor from the attorney-general's office had "advised" the grand jurors that they should not indict Swift and Talbot.

Under an apparently clearly defined rule laid down by the Supreme Court in the case of the Commonwealth against Pelletier, a prosecutor may only advise a grand jury on the law.

Atty.-Gen. Warner had no comment to make on the suggestion that motions to quash are expected.

JURORS' REPLY EXPECTED

The grand jury has made no reply to the implied criticism from the attorney-general.

If the indictments against the 15 defendants are dropped through court action as a result of motions to quash, fresh indictments might be sought through the submission of evidence to the grand jury.

"Southern dry Democrats have challenged the Democrats of the rest of the nation," he said. "We should accept the challenge. I shall be a candidate for delegate to the national convention on whatever Al Smith wants as a program to the limit of 100 per cent.

"Smith's heroic campaign against such tremendous odds in 1928 rebuilt the national democracy and made possible Democratic victories in a score of states, Massachusetts among them.

"I am quite sure that followers of Smith in 1928 will step aside and allow a little group of Southern drys to dictate our policies.

"I do not propose to follow the leadership of any prohibitionist in any place at any time."

WET PLANK FAVORED.

Governor Ely said Chairman Raskob's plan was similar to one in a majority of the 1928 platforms, and that he heartily favored it. Mayor Curley, Dist. Atty. Foley and President Bacon of the Senate issued brief statements commending the plan.

Raskob's Wet Move Is Relief to Democrats

Washington, March 6 (INS)—The prohibition issue, as it affects the Democratic party, was pushed squarely into the open today—to remain until the national convention next year makes its choice of wet or dry for the presidential campaign of 1932.

Chairman John J. Raskob's bold proposal that the party adopt a "home rule" plank on the liquor question promises to be the principal topic in Democratic circles from now on.

The strategy in pushing the proposal forward at this time is to allow a year's discussion in advance of the 1932 convention, so delegates may be chosen with full knowledge of what they are going to be asked to endorse.

The Raskob-Smith idea is that the projection of the fight at this early date will eliminate bitterness and conflict in the convention proper.

Two Arrested in Brockton Robbery

Brockton, March 6—Police early today arrested Edward J. Murphy, 27, of Dover st., and Norman Landry, 26, of Annis st., on charges of stealing a watch and $40 from Frank Stanton of North Weymouth in Ward 4 last night. Stanton, who was charged with drunkenness, identified a watch found on Landry's person as his, police say.

Labor Loses Election

London, March 6 (AP)—The Labor Party failed to gain control of the London County Council in yesterday's election, losing seven of the seats they had in the last council.

Model Boy's Pal

Earl Turner, classmate and friend of Russell Noble, was one of those with whom the "model boy" of Haverhill discussed the hammer attack on Mrs. Clara E. Ellis, of which he is accused. Turner revealed that Noble had attended a dance before the attack.

MORE SNOW ON WAY HERE

Partly cloudy tonight and Saturday, probably followed by now Saturday night; not much change in temperature; moderate north or northwest winds. The minimum temperature tonight will be about 28 degrees.

All along the North Atlantic coast the fury of the tides was felt, but the fiercest blows were struck on the Massachusetts and New Hampshire shore lines, with Winthrop suffering most.

HUNDREDS HOMELESS

Today the coast is one long line of splintered dwellings, undermined and shattered sea walls and breakwaters, and torn and undermined highways.

Hundreds of citizens, made homeless or victims of extensive damage, are being aided by civic organizations to reclaim their property and return to their normal routine.

No actual estimate of the extensive damage has yet been made, but it is certain the losses will run into millions of dollars.

The greatest damage was done by the noonday tide on Wednesday with further losses being piled on the total with the tide Wednesday night and yesterday morning. Diminishing winds yesterday kept the damage down considerably.

SNOW FLOWS CLEAR SAND

Two hundred workmen were busy in Winthrop clearing Shore Drive, roads radiating out of it and Shirley st., of sand and stones.

The Point Shirley end of Shirley st. was four feet deep in rubble, over which residents were forced to make their way on foot to and from Winthrop Beach.

Heavy snow plows were used to clear the streets, the sand and stones being carried away in trucks.

Help Reaches Disabled Liner With 100 Aboard

New York, March 6 (INS)—Safety of passengers and crew of the Furness-Red Cross liner Rosalind was virtually assured today, as the S. S. Newfoundland, of the same line, stood by the disabled ship awaiting arrival of one of the company's tugs.

Meantime the storm had abated, and the tug was expected to reach the Rosalind at any moment and take it in tow to Halifax, N. S.

With 33 passengers and a crew of about 70 on board, the Rosalind lost her propeller yesterday in the storm, as she was about 150 miles southeast of Nova Scotia, en route to New York from St. Johns.

The Newfoundland, from Boston for Liverpool, changed her course on receiving the Rosalind's distress signals. The Newfoundland will proceed on her voyage after the Rosalind is safely in otw of the tug, company officials said.

Pola Negri May Soon Appear in Talkies

Hollwood, Cal., March 6 (AP)—Pola Negri, who flashed brilliantly across the silent film horizon a few years ago and then retired, has received two offers to appear in talkies.

Contracts have been submitted to the former star by Radio-Keith-Orpheum and Warner Bros. She is now in France, but friends here say she will accept the larger figure offered by R-K-O and return to Hollywood within two months. Stories selected for her will take into account her Polish accent.

VIVIAN'S BEAUTY THE MYSTERY OF IT ALL SMILING VIVIAN WHERE WOULD SHE HAVE STOPPED? VIVIAN PEEKING HOW FAR WILL THE PROBE GO? SULLEN VIVIAN

Questions that have burned their way into the mind of the public still are awaiting answer in connection with the strangling of Vivian Gordon, vice tipster and feminine racketeer. "I have some information," wrote the slain Broadway "butterfly," but just what and how valuable it was police are still trying to learn. Questioning of companions of Miss Gordon have failed to reveal whom she wished to expose, but her diaries, skeletons of her thoughts, have resulted in the detention of two men, her lawyer and an ex-convict, in connection with the murder. New York officials have a big job ahead on its vice probe, plus the Vivian Gordon killing. (International Newsreel photo.)

ONLY 16 AND WHAT A GIRL

WITNESS IN SHOOTING

Margaret Murray, only 16 and "the toughest girl in New York," is to be questioned as to her alleged control of a holdup gang. For the present, she is working with the law in the case against accused slayers of her partner, "Four-Gun Stephen" Sweeney. (International Newsreel photo.)

GOV. ROOSEVELT MAY SPONSOR STATE PROBE

New York, March 6 (AP)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's interest in the strangling of Vivian Gordon, vice graft informant, infused new life into the hunt for her slayers today.

The governor revealed at Albany that Dist. Atty. Charles B. McLaughlin of the Bronx sent him a report on the case a week ago. He said he had not requested it and declined to say whether he would sponsor a State investigation.

DEATH KNOT CLUE

Analysis by scientists of the rope which was found around Miss Gordon's neck produced new leads. It was the type used for clotheslines and the knot was one usually employed in cavalry stables to tie horses. The man who used it was left-handed, strong and possibly a negro, it was theorized.

Aware that Miss Gordon was an enthusiastic horsewoman, the district attorney sent detectives to all riding academies in hope of finding a similar strand of rope. Fifteen witnesses were heard by the grand jury and most of them were eliminated.

Some 50 men whose names were found in the woman's seven diaries and who authorities said were financially and socially prominent, were interviewed privately by the district attorney's staff.

LIFE THREATENED.

John E. C. Bischoff, Miss Gordon's ex-husband, disclosed at Audubon, N. J., that he had received many warning letters since her death and the suicide of their daughter, Benita. They threatened his life and his business standing, he said.

The diary in which Benita revealed her shame over the revelations concerning her mother likely will be buried with her, he said. The funeral will be held today.

GUNGIRL TELLS OF SLAYING

Mineola, N. Y., March 6 — Margaret Murray, 16-year-old queen of a youthful band that admitted participation in 500 holdups, broke gangland's code and talked in court here in efforts to convict two of the gang for the murder of Stephen Sweeney, its former leader and her sweetheart.

She said Fred Schoenhardt and "Handsome Harry" McCormack got Sweeney drunk "on rye highballs at $5 each," then took him to a spot near Hicksville and shot him.

Miss Murray testified that the band all lived in the same apartment but had separate rooms. She said she was the lookout on all holdups, got her share of the loot and paid her share of operating expenses. She said she met Sweeney while she was a dance hall hostess.

PRISONER CRIES AT DEATH TRIAL

Valparaiso, Ind., March 6 (INS) —Mention of the name of Arlene Draves, his dead sweetheart, today caused Virgil Kirkland, on trial for her alleged murder, to break down and cry like a child when he took the witness stand in his own defense.

The former high school athlete possessed none of the self-assurance that marked his appearance when the trial opened before Judge Grant Crumpacker almost two weeks ago. There was desperation —with no hint of arrogance—manifest as he told the story which may save him from the electric chair.

Cab Plant to Start Up

Kalamazoo, March 6 (AP)—The local plant of Checker Cab Manufacturing Corporation, closed down for the past six weeks, will resume operations Monday, giving employment to 500 men.

Jackie Coogan Asks Court's O.K. on His $7500 a Week

Los Angeles, March 6 (AP)—Jackie Coogan, who began his screen career with Charles Chaplin in "The Kid," and is now 16, today sought court approval of a contract with Paramount Studios under which he will receive $7500 a week.

With Jackie was Mitzi Green, 10, another juvenile player, who asked Superior Judge Marshall F. McComb to make official her contract with Paramount for a salary which will increase from $625 to $1250 weekly.

The two have appeared together in talkies based on Mark Twain stories.

STARS TAKE BIG PLUNGE

POPE EXALTS HUMILITY

Vatican City, March 6 (INS)—Christian humility does not imply a weakness of character," Pope Pius XI. declared today in a letter to Bishop Dallacosta of Padova, regarding celebration of the seventh centenary of St. Anthony. The Pope approved Bishop Dallacosta's initiative in inviting the world bishops to participate in the celebrations.

"Christian humility," His Holiness wrote, "proves a soul of fortitude when it is necessary to defend the rights of God, Church and Pope, unjustly violated."

Goal of Gandhi Is 'Full Independence'

New Delhi, India, March 6 (AP)—Complete independence—what the Indian calls "purna swaraj"—is Mahatma Gandhi's goal in his dealings with Great Britain, he told newspaper correspondents today.

His plan for complete self-government with "disciplined rule from within" makes it possible for India to remain within the British Empire, he said.

"But our partnership with England must be on terms of absolute equality."

GIRLS SOLD TO RICH SUITORS

Los Angeles, March 6 (US)—Amazing stories of having been members of an asserted "girl bazaar," which furnished wealthy men with unsophisticated and inexperienced minors for fees ranging from $200 to $2000, were told by four high school girls, all under 18, to members of the district attorney's staff.

A fifth girl, 18, said to have been virtually sold on the block to the highest bidder, told her tale from a hospital cot, where she is undergoing medical treatment.

District Attorney Fitts ordered the arrest of John P. Mills, millionaire real estate dealer of Los Angeles and San Diego, and William H. Jobbleman and Olive Clark Day, his wife.

Mills was charged with an offence against Clarice Tauber, 16. Jobelmann, 38, was formerly press agent for Alexander Pantages, millionaire showman. His wife, formerly known as Dorothy Clark, when she was 16 in 1923, brought a $200,000 suit against Herbert Rawlinson, film actor. The suit was dismissed a year later.

'RED HEAD' CONFESSED ALL, MRS. GROSS' MOTHER CHARGES

HEARD HER SAY SHE POSED AS HIS WIFE

Salem, March 6—Additional testimony that Mrs. Katherine Perkins, so-called "bandau girl," had admitted having lived with Solomon Gross, was given today in the resumed divorce trial of Mrs. Gertrude Gross here.

Mrs. Harry Goodman, mother of Mrs. Gross, testified she overheard admission by Mrs. Perkins while in her husband's office with her daughter. She said:

"My daughter called me about noon and asked me if I were going to father's office. I said 'Yes,' and she came down after me.

LISTENED AT CRACK

"We met Mr. Goodman when we got there and entered an inner office. We were in there about half an hour when Mr. Goodman rose and said: 'I guess this is the girl I'm waiting for,' and went into an outer office.

"The door into the outer office was open a crack and we could hear the conversation. Mrs. Perkins said: 'Where is Mr. Gross?' Mr. Goodman answered: 'He's gone out for a soda. Just how well do you know Mr. Gross?'

"Mrs. Perkins answered:

"'Just from working at the factory.'

"Mr. Goodman said:

"'I have knowledge you have known him better than that.'

"Mrs. Perkins replied:

"'I've been out to lunch with him.'

"He questioned her further and she said she had been to dinner and dances with Mr. Gross several times.

PROMISED TO FORGET.

"Mr. Goodman then asked: "'Is there anything else,' and Mrs. Perkins broke down and cried. Mr. Goodman said: 'I'll forget your name if you'll tell me everything. Did you ever live with Mr. Gross as man and wife?' Mrs. Perkins said: 'Yes.' Asked how many times, she said once, but admitted it was maybe three or four times.

"Asked if Mr. Gross gave her money for presents, Mrs. Perkins said he had. Mr. Goodman then said: 'You are not working now. How do you get along?' 'Mr. Gross gives me a weekly allowance,' Mrs. Perkins replied."

DENIES 'FRAME UP'

Under cross examination it was brought out that Mrs. Goodman looked out the door of the office and saw Mrs. Perkins leaving.

Mrs. Goodman followed her daughter to the stand, Mrs. Gross' cross examination concluding with denials that she had asked William Sullivan to create evidence of Gross' unfaithfulness. She admitted she had never taken the children to see their father after the separation.

Governor Assassinated

Lisbon, Portugal, March 6 (AP)—Reports today from Lourenco Marques in Portuguese East Africa, said Capt. Ribee Ginho, district governor of Mozambique, had been assassinated by an unemployed laborer.

HELD IN GIRL 'AUCTION'

Olive Day Clark, formerly Dorothy Clark of Brookline, who is under arrest with her husband, William H. Jobleman, in Los Angeles, charged with being implicated in sales of minor girls at $200 to $2000 each to wealthy men. Dorothy Clark sued Herbert Rawlinson in 1922 for $200,000 on an attack charge but the suit was dismissed in 1923.

SOVIET FORCES PREPARE FOR WORLD WAR

Moscow, March 6 (INS)—Feverish military preparations on an unprecedented scale against what is believed to be an impending world attack against the Soviet Union are going on in all cities and villages of the country under the leadership of the Comsomols, the League of Communist Youths, and Osoaviachim, the Civilian Defense Society.

PEASANTS CONSCRIPTED

In the Leningrad Corps Area, peasants have been conscripted and mobilized to guard the Finner frontier. The city is subjected weekly to sham air raids and gas attacks, during which only members of the Communist party, Comsomols and members of the Osoaviachim are allowed on the streets at night, and all other innocent or ignorant pedestrians are presumed to be enemy spies.

The central committee of the Comsomols has announced a plan to train 5,000,000 civilian boys and girls in the art of war this year.

OUST UNBELIEVERS

The Moscow committee of Comsomols issued a statement ordering the expulsion of those members who underestimate the danger of war and shirk military training in preparation for the coming war.

President Accepts Legge Resignation

Washington, March 6 (AP)—President Hoover has accepted the resignation of Alexander P. Legge as chairman of the Farm Board.

Vice-Chairman Stone has been often mentioned as the next chairman. President Hoover is understood to have attempted to persuade Legge to remain another year.

Shipping Hit by Storm

Moscow, March 6 (AP)—Dispatches from Black Sea ports today told of heavy storms in which a number of trawlers had been driven aground. All shipping was reported tied up.

Working Girl Styles May Be Dictated by Engineers

Chicago, March 6 (AP)—Engineers instead of dressmakers may dictate the workingt girl's styles in the not distant future.

A prediction to this effect as made before a safety conference by Miss Ruth L. Stone of the Western Electric Company. She said the necessity of assuring "reasonable degree of safety for all types of working women would force safety engineers to design their clothes.

"The present styles, which are changed by dressmakers every year," she said, "will soon give way to a conservative standard of low-heel shoes, short skirts and short hair."

CITY OF CHELSEA BANKRUPT, IS CHARGE

The hearing of the legislative committee on cities on the petition to establish a finance commission to investigate and curb alleged waste in the Chelsea city government was thrown into an uproar by the charge that Chelsea was bankrupt.

Pointing out that not a single bank had bid for the bonds when the city floated a temporary loan in December, Samuel S. Eisenberg, vice-president of the Chelsea Chamber of Commerce, openly asserted the city was insolvent. In addition he charged that the present government was destroying Chelsea, causing the best citizens to move and decreasing the population.

WHALEN IN HOT RETORT

These charges brought a hot retort from Mayor John J. Whalen, who asserted that politics were at the base of Eisenberg's charges. Rep. William H. Melley, who opposed the petition, also emphatically denied the bankruptcy charge.

Following Eisenberg's assertions Mayor Whalen heatedly replied:

"Politics are involved in this case as is illustrated by the words of Mr. Eisenberg, who built the rottenest high school in the state in Chelsea. 'Mr. Eisenberg would not dare favor the bill for a finance commission if Mr. Quigley were still mayor. He received a fee of $62,000 for his high school plans under Mayor Quigley's administration and had no fault to find then.

"I am perfectly willing to have a finance commission appointed if it is conducted properly, but I will not have an undercurrent of politicians saying the city is going to the dogs."

SAYS CHARGES UNFOUNDED

Rep. Melley insisted that Eisenberg's statement about the city being bankrupt was "fallacious and unfounded." He pointed out that the liabilities were not in excess of the assets and explained the refusal of banks to bid for the bonds.

"A short time before this loan was made," he said, "Mr. Eisenberg came out with a statement calling upon taxpayers to refuse to pay their taxes. Banks thought we were running a Bolshevist government."

Other speakers included Rep. John W. MacLeod, sponsor of the bill, and former Mayor John D. Beck. MacLeod quoted items of expenses for street sprinkling in January and February in the auditor's report and questioned the possibility of street sprinkling in the winter.

Former Mayor Beck said he thought the city could be governed honestly and that he did not believe it necessary to beseech the Legislature for permission to "clean house and keep it clean."

BOSTON CITIZEN FINDS HEALTH

Another Victory for Konjola, the Modern Medicine of 32 Ingredients.

Quit experimenting . . . quit groping as if in the dark, for the medicine you need. Tens of thousands of men and women, enjoying glorious health, urge you to put your faith in Konjola, the modern medicine for ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and for rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. What, indeed, could be wiser than to profit by their experiences. For your health's sake see what Konjola has done and is doing. Visit the Konjola Man at the Epstein drug store, Epstein's, Scollay Square, Boston. Hear of actual cases, any number of them, where Konjola has triumphed after all else tried had been found wanting. Read this opinion of Konjola from Mr. Geo. W. Slavin, Commonwealth Hotel, 16 Bowdoin Street, Boston, then you will better understand why seven million bottles of Konjola were used in two years. Mr. Slavin said to the Konjola Man:

"I know from my own experience that Konjola is a good medicine. As the result of liver trouble I was bilious, had headaches and dizzy spells. My appetite was not good and I felt the need of a good tonic. But what to take was the question. Then I heard about Konjola, and after learning that it was made from roots and herbs, I decided to try it. Well, Konjola restored my health. I have improved in every way and feel it my duty to tell others about this new remedy. I gladly give my sincere endorsement to Konjola."

If you have health guard it; it is your most valued possession. If you suffer from ills that Konjola is designed to relieve, give Konjola a chance to prove its powers. A test is all that is asked for Konjola.

The Konjola Man is at Epstein's, Scollay Sq. (Epstein Drug Co.), Boston, where daily he is meeting the public and explaining the merits of this master medicine. Konjola is sold also at all leading drug stores in Boston and vicinity.

Last Congress Broke All Peace Records

Washington, March 6 (INS)—The seventy-first Congress, just departed, shattered more legislative records than any other peace-time Congress in history, Senator Watson, Republican leader, declared today.

Watson said the Congress, which came into existence with the Hoover administration, appropriated more money, authorized more public works, provided more benefits for veterans, settled more controversial issues, and finished its necessary program sooner than any other in history, outside war periods.

20 Minutes' Worth of Talk in 3 Hours

Washington, March 6 (AP)—The physical effort of talking for three hours or longer at a stretch is no more than the public has a right to expect from its senators, but it shouldn't be necessary, says Elmer Thomas, who was talking when Congress adjourned.

"It is unfortunate that anybody has to keep talking three hours," he remarked today. "I could have said all I had to say in 20 minutes."

Many Choice Sweater Styles

By ANN ARDEN

WHEN IS a sweater not a sweater? When it looks like a blouse, of course. Time was when this useful garment had strictly utilitarian purposes and very little shape, and often came to an inglorious end as a blanket for the family canine.

BUT FASHION has put out a deft and clever hand, and glorified the plebeian sweater into something that's feminine and dainty. Witness these charming knitted blouses (alias for sweaters), that college girls just wouldn't and couldn't be without. They've become aristocrats almost overnight; they've lost that "take me as I am" look; in short, they've gone feminine.

SOME ARE soft and woolly, some are made of lace knit, bound with silk crepe, and others are open-mesh in gay colorings of subtle pastels. And they're most exact as to cut and fit. No wonder the girls can't have enough of them, they're so precisely right for the sports wardrobe. We know a sophomore who owns six, and wears them straight through the day, varying her color combinations with different colored skirts.

THE SPORTS or informal daytime costume pictured would be a welcome addition to any wardrobe. The skipper blue flannel skirt, has low-placed fullness, and slit pockets that do not deviate from a straight and narrow, up and down line, since they top two side front gores. The flower blue jersey knit sweater-blouse, has ribbed lower edge, assuring snug fit, and is distinguished by white mesh yoke top, bow tie, and cuffs on the short sleeves. The Agnes turban has crochet top to match the blouse, and an adjustable tweed-knit scarf in plaid of vivid tones, draped to form halo. These smart little pastel sweater-blouses worn with dark skirts are quite the rage at the Southern resorts, while mesh has invaded nearly every informal fashion.

AFTER THE feminine frills of most blouses you will find a refreshing note of masculinity in the waistcoat blouse. It looks like a trim vest yet it is entirely a blouse in its careful detailing, long sleeves and silken softness. This is devastating in Patou's new opalina—green or yellow.

Benefit for Palestine Work

By NANCY BREWSTER

Planned as a cabaret-dance, with entertainment and night-club ensemble, the affair is under the supervision of Mrs. Gertrude N. Mason. Assisting her are Libby Jacobson, Roxbury chairman; Ruth Salzwzy, Brookline chairman; secretaries, Ruth Zakon and Lillian Goldman. Miss Hannah Goldberg, as president of the Boston unit, is general head.

With the proceeds of the dance the Boston Hadassah Juniors anticipate a first payment of the annual $7500 contribution to the Palestine rehabilitation work.

CAROL, SUCCESS AS SNOOPER, HITS AIDES

Bucharest, March 6 (INS)—A number of the Rumanian capital's crestfallen officials suspected today that King Carol, although scorning the disguise of a mendicant, has lifted a page from the Arabian Nights and adopted the methods of Caliph Haroun Al Rashid.

Tiring of hearing repeated complaints charging notorious deficiencies of duty against his departmental chiefs here, the monarch quietly began a round of surprise visits to different municipal offices throughout Bucharest.

His Haroun Al Rashid tactics shortly resulted in the biggest shakeup as yet experienced here, with numerous high and low officials suddenly looking for new jobs.

Entering a police station incognito and accompanied only by his secretary, King Carol found the station police captain so befuddled with liquor that he thought the twigot was a drinking mug. He lost his job.

In another station, Carol was leisurely directed from one official to another in seeking some information. Two prisoners were being flogged mercilessly in another police station when the monarch walked in.

N. E. POWER CONTROL BARED

Washington, March 6 (INS)—Testimony concerning the financial construction and stock transaction of the predecessor of the New England Power Association was completed today at the Federal Trade Commission hearings on the financial activities of the association.

K. A. Miller, commission accountant, told how the holding company in 15 years prior to the formation of the association in 1926, gradually gained control of 28 per cent of the utility companies of New England. He cited numerous instances of the "writing up" of the values of securities and said the New England Company in 11 years before it became part of the association, earned 325 times its interest requirements.

The president of the association, F. D. Comstock, was present and took notes on the proceedings.

BETTY'S LOVE DREAM ENDS

QUARRELLED ON HONEYMOON

Married less than a month, Betty Compton, musical comedy actress, and her husband, Eddie Dowling, have parted already, according to reports in New York. On their return from Havana, Miss Compton went to the home of friends and Dowling returned to his mother.

BETTY COMPTON LEAVES MATE

New York, March 6 (AP)—The New York Daily News said today that Miss Betty Compton, musical comedy actress, and her husband, Eddie Dowling, parted ways at the conclusion of their honeymoon.

Returning from Havana last Thursday, the News said, Miss Compton went to the home of friends in Westchester, and Dowling hied himself to his mother's apartment. They have denied themselves to interviewers, and the cause of the purported separation could not be learned, according to the Daily News.

Miss Compton was said to be contemplating a trip to California, possibly to Hollywood. Dowling was reported seeking a job, though he has been employed as a scenario writer by the Paramount studios. They were married secretly February 16.

Pedestrians in Need of Better 'Brakes,' Asserts Expert

Chicago, March 6 (AP)—Many pedestrians need better breaks.

This opinion was expressed before a safety conference by G. E. Cress of Mason City, Ia., who has made a scientific study of pedestrians and their reactions to danger.

"If a man is walking at the rate of four miles an hour," he said, "and a manhole suddenly opens at a distance of three feet in front of him, he'll probably fall in. Ninety-nine out of a hundred would," said Mr. Cress.

His muscles could stop him short, he said, even if they got the order from his brain.

WHERE NEW ENGLAND BUYS ITS FOODS

HUBBY FLOP AT LOVE; FREED

Bridgeport, Ct., March 6—A hearing in superior court here bared the wreck of another May-September romance among the socially-elect when blonde Mrs. Cuyo Middletown Marston, 39, was granted a divorce from her distinguished architect husband, J. Elmer Marston, 60.

Mrs. Marston said her spouse completely fooled her during their courtship with his ardent wooing. His convinced her he was a man of fiery passion, a great sweetheart despite his mellow years, she told the court.

But, she continued, marriage proved him nothing but an elderly gentleman from whom youth had gone completely. Mrs. Marston said she lived with him for 10 weeks and then suffered a nervous breakdown. Marston did not contest the suit.

Inquest Fails to Solve Death Mystery

Springfield, March 6—Despite the statements emanating from Inspector Mitchell, special investigator for the Attorney-General's office, that two or three arrests were possible after the secret inquest, the intimations after the inquest was closed were that the mystery of the murder of Frank Wilson, alleged bootlegger, whose skeleton was found in Agawam three years after he disappeared will never be solved.

Two Held in $25,000 in Holdup Attempt

Bail of $25,000 each was set in Middlesex Superior Criminal Court for Frank F. Wood, former national bank examiner, and Joseph Koskas of South Boston, when they were arraigned on indictments charging them with assault with intent to rob in connection with an attempt to hold up the Holliston Savings Bank in Holliston, February 7.

Dorchester Street Named After Ely

Governor Ely is now numbered among the few living men to be honored by the city in having a street named after him here. The mayor has placed his signature upon the order of the street commission, approving Ely rd., from Fredericia ave. to Kenmore rd., near Gallivan boulevard, Dorchester.

Body Recovered After 5 Months

Ipswich, March 6 — Just five months since he was swept to his death with three other men, from a boat in the Ipswich river, the body of Joseph Gaffney, 44, 9 Brook rd., was found washed up on the marshes at lower East st., six miles from where he was drowned. The three other bodies had previously been recovered.

Redistricting Group Will Not Be Changed

Attempts of Representative Lewis K. Sullivan of Dorchester, and William H. Hearn of East Boston to get a change in the appointments to the committee on redistricting, on the ground that the Democrats were not given proper recognition in the appointments, were defeated in the House yesterday by a vote of 75 to 129.

Recount Demanded in Arlington Election

A petition was filed with Arlington's town clerk yesterday for a recount of the votes cast at the annual town election there last Monday for selectman. Leonard Collins won the election by just 25 votes over Selectman Arthur P. Wyman, chairman of the board, who sought re-election.

WHICH WOULD YOU RATHER DO?

TAKE PILLS and drugs—or add roughage to your diet? When constipated, you either have to do one or the other.

Isn't it the best—the most healthful and pleasant way—to eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN? This ready-to-eat cereal is welcome as a good food and it is guaranteed to furnish the roughage to relieve and to prevent both temporary and recurring constipation.

Try it today. Millions have proved that eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN prevents constipation. And it also adds needed iron to the diet.

Try Kellogg's ALL-BRAN with fruits or honey added. Use it for making delightful, fluffy bran muffins, omelets, etc. At your grocer's, in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Beaten by Storms

Ensign Harold MacFarlane, whose race by air from Pensacola to the bedside of his dying father in Haverhill was lost when stormy weather delayed his plane.

AIR RACE WITH DEATH LOSES

Haverhill, March 6—While his son, Ensign Harold MacFarlane, U. S. N., was rushing northward by plane from the Pensacola, Fla., naval base, D. Archie MacFarlane, Haverhill business man, died last night in the Benson Hospital.

Ensign MacFarlane, notified of his father's critical illness, began his losing race with death Wednesday night, but was delayed by stormy weather. He is expected to reach Haverhill this morning.

The elder MacFarlane, former president of the Haverhill Chamber of Commerce, was a sergeant in the aviation corps during the war. He was 50 years old.

Parents Sue Doctor in Death of Child

Chicago, March 6 (US)—In an action unique in Chicago courts, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Reed of Palatine, Ill., have brought suit for $100,000 damages against Dr. John Renner, whose alleged inattention they hold responsible for the death of their baby, John, Jr., two years ago.

Silent on Rift

Beverly Hills, Cal., March 6 (AP)—Pauline Starke, stage and screen actress, has declined to confirm or deny reports that she and her husband, Jack White, film director and producer, were near the parting of ways.

Bachelor Waives His Right to Job for Married Man

When Mayor Manning of Lynn announced that George T. Kelley, single, of 585 Western ave., a reserve patrolman was third on the civil service list and eligible for appointment to the fire department, Kelley made the unusual request that the opportunity be given to some married man with dependents or to some one who was too old to take the civil service examination again.

LESS FOR COACH THAN PROF.

New Haven, Ct., March 6 (INS)—Athletic coaches at Yale are being paid less than Yale professors according to Yale Alumni Weekly today.

Replying to an alumnus who asked how remuneration of professors and coaches compared, the Weekly declared:

"The present scale of Yale University salaries for full-time professors ranges from $6000 to $9000 with a few special cases at $10,000. No athletic coach at Yale receives over the normal professorial maximum of $9000, and only one receives that.

"The next highest is $8000, and the other salaries scale down from that."

JIMINEZ COUP STARTLES PERU

Lima, March 6 (AP)—A coup d'etat, staged with startling suddenness last night, brought a new group of army officers into power in Peru today, displacing the civil-military junta that took office last Sunday.

The head of the new junta is Lieut.-Col. Gustavo Jimenez, who left Lima a week ago in command of an expeditionary force which was to subdue the rebels at Arequipa. The expedition was diverted by naval officers, who then brought about the deposition of the provisional president, Lieut.-Col. Luis M. Sanchez Cerro.

In a manifesto Jimenez said he would strive to compose the differences of the southern, central and northern Peruvian factions, and to carry out the Sanchez Cerro manifesto at Arequipa August 22 last, which promised elections and return to constitutional government.

DOUBLE—MILK

IT'S SLICED . . . and ready to serve

Tested and Approved 4131 by Bureau of Foods, Sanitation and Health of GOOD HOUSEKEEPING MAGAZINE

The Good Housekeeping seal is known everywhere as a reliable assurance of purity and quality. Slo-baked Wonder Bread has merited this award.

YOU didn't know we used milk in bread? Just watch us pour it into Wonder-Cut Bread! Pure, rich, pasteurized milk, (the kind to grow on)—plenty of it, DOUBLE-MILK.

And flour—not just any kind of flour, but a specially selected short-patent flour, milled from the very heart of the wheat berry, always the same in quality.

Next comes slo-baking. That's the secret that seals in the taste-tempting flavor, seals in all the nourishing goodness of Wonder-Cut Bread. Now add the glad news of a bread that's sliced and all ready to serve. Each slice smooth and even. Each slice just toaster-size. Or sandwich-size. Right for the bread tray. No bother . . . No crumbs . . . No waste.

Is Wonder-Cut Bread news? Ask any of the thousands who use no other bread. Remember: double-milk, special flour, slo-baking, sliced for convenience and economy. And the best news is the delicate bread flavor that cannot be copied. Serve Wonder-Cut Bread for every bread use—delicious, nourishing. Always fresh at your grocer's—delivered twice each day.

PUSSY SETTING TREE RECORD

Melrose's tree-sitting cat had occupied its perch at the top of a lofty elm in West Wyoming ave. more than 48 hours today.

Nearly 100 feet above the street, it has defied attempts of firemen and a youth who climbed the tree to bring it down. The cat arrived at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, presumably to get a birdseye view of the storm then raging.

Pass the Pink Salt, Please; Perhaps We'll Do It Soon

The Interstate Commerce Commission, whose desiccated rate hearings scarcely can be considered a box office attraction, worried itself over pink salt.

"Pink salt," deposed a witness, "occurs in isolated pockets, its pinkness due to the action of iron oxides. Most of it is sought by curio hunters. It's just as salty as other salt, but the public would have to be educated to use it for table purposes."

There's colored loaf sugar for bridge parties. Why not pink salt?

FLIERS BATTLE OFF PANAMA

U. S. S. Arkansas, March 6 (AP)—Airplanes from the fleet's giant aircraft carriers were utilized in the annual maneuvers 200 miles south of Panama City today to seek out a "phantom" enemy.

One by one the planes took off from the decks of the carriers, stationed behind the line of battleships, and forming the familiar "V" formations dashed toward the "enemy."

Johnson Shows No Change

St. Louis, March 6 (AP)—No improvement was noted today in the condition of Ban Johnson, former American league president, who is seriously ill here.

RED EXILE CASE OFF 10 DAYS

Hearings on the deportation of Miss Edith Berkman, Patrick Devine and William T. Murdock, Lawrence strike leaders, will be held the week of March 16, Mrs. Anna C. M. Tillinghast, immigration commissioner, announced today.

The hearing date was set after a plea in federal court for reduction in the $5000 bail on Murdock failed yesterday.

The three were arrested in Lawrence Friday by immigration inspectors after they were bailed in civil court pending grand jury hearings on charges of conspiracy in connection with the woolen mill strike.

A petition for lease of the three was drawn up in Peabody at a meeting of the International Labor Defense with the wife of Devine as one of the speakers.

ELOPERS DRAW OUT SAVINGS

Ossipee, N. H., March 6—Police continued their search today for Mrs. Lois Lane, 30, who is alleged by the authorities to have left Wednesday with a 20-year-old youth in her husband's automobile. She is charged with larceny of the machine.

After Theodore Lane reported his wife's disappearance, the authorities found that Mrs. Lane had withdrawn securities in her name, valued at $7000, which had been left with the Wolfeboro National Bank at Wolfeboro, and had withdrawn a joint savings account in her name and her husband's.

Investigation, the authorities said, showed that the youth had simultaneously withdrawn his savings and the pair were last seen together apparently en route toward Massachusetts. They are believed heading toward California, where Mrs. Lane once lived.

3,800,000 Radio Sets Sold in 1930

Washington, March 6 (US)—More than 3,800,000 radio receivers were sold in 1930, more than expected, although 610,000 under 1929, according to O. M. Caldwell, editor of Radio Retailing.

"The favorable showing was due to the popularity of the midget and drastic price reductions all along the line," he said.

Yacht Club Sued by South Boston Girl

Margaret O'Toole of South Boston has brought suit for $5000 in the superior court against the Mosquito Fleet Yacht Club of South Boston, for injuries alleged to have been received when she was pushed off the float of the yacht club into the water last August.

The following real estate transfers of deeds recorded at the Suffolk Registry were taken from the files of the Boston Real Estate Exchange on Thursday:

Raskob Sued for $50,000 in Crash

Washington, March 6 (US)—John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, has been sued for $50,000 damages in District of Columbia Supreme Court. The suit was brought by David Robert Freeling of Washington, who claimed his automobile was struck Monday by a machine in which he alleged Raskob was riding toward Washington on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard.

Babson's Cemetery Plan Up Monday

The petition of Babson Institute to use a portion of its campus for a burial place for Roger W. Babson's world famed statistician, and his immediate family, will be acted upon at the town meeting of Wellesley, to be held at Alumnae hall on Monday night.

Sailors Keep Fire From Depth Bombs

With several depth bombs of great explosive power stored in a magazine not far distant, members of the fire-fighting squad of the U. S. S. destroyer Leary, tied up at pier 7 in the Charlestown Navy Yard, fought a gasoline fire, extinguishing it before anything of a serious nature occurred.

Missouri Turns Down Dry Referendum Plan

Jefferson City, Mo., March 6—The Missouri House of Representatives defeated a resolution proposing a State referendum in 1932 to determine sentiment on repeal or modification of prohibitive laws. The vote was 78 to 51. The wets showed their greatest strength in recent years.

Spot Pond Bus Line Banned by State

There will be no bus line between Stoneham sq. and Malden sq. via Spot Pond, according to a decision handed down by the State Department of Public Utilities and forwarded to the town of Stoneham and the city of Malden today.

Youth Is Held as Looter of Autos

Thefts of bags from automobiles in the theatrical district the past few weeks are believed by police to have been solved following the arrest of Joseph L. Chapman, 34, of Medford st., South End, and the recovery of five traveling bags.

Railroad Worth 95 Million

Washington, March 6—A valuation of $85,416,861, as of June 30, 1917, was placed on the owned property of the Lehigh Valley railroad by the Interstate Commerce Commission today.

RADIO PICTURES TO STAR IVAN LEBEDEFF IN RUSSIAN SOCIETY STORY

MISS DUNNE ALSO IN CAST

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, March 6—Ivan Lebedeff comes by his hand-kissing, monocle-wearing habits honestly. In the days when the Czar was ruling in Russia, Mr. Lebedeff was important at the Russian court. I never did learn whether his father was an admiral in the Russian navy, a prince at the court, or an attorney-general.

All those Russians are always one or the other, but anyway it has been proved that Mr. Lebedeff was really important. He is now in America, but Radio Pictures are not going to forget his past.

Louella O. Parsons

He will be starred in "Strange Women," a story of Russian society based on actual incidents in his own life. Who better than Mr. Lebedeff could write it? He is co-author with Benn (and the two n's are correct) Levy, English playwright, now under contract to Radio Pictures. Mr. Levy, by the way, is the author of "Mrs. Moonlight" and "Art and Mrs. Bottle," now playing in London and New York.

Richard Boleslavsky will direct and the feminine charmer who will be the recipient of Ivan Lebedeff's hand-kissing attentions will most likely be Irene Dunne. Doris Anderson is doing the dialogue and Henry Hobart will act as producer.

I THOUGHT I heard somebody hissing in the other night and turned around, and who do you think it was? Benny Rubin back in town. Benny said he wasn't hissing me, just trying to attract my attention. He said, "I know you won't be interested, but I just signed a contract with RKO-Pathe to make a series of pictures."

THINGS OF interest heard in Hollywood are that John Barrymore will not retire after he completes "The Genius." He has just signed a new long-term contract with Warner Brothers. John left Warners once and now he seems content to stick to the lamp fireside. William Morris, father of Chester Morris, is over on the Radio lot playing a part in "Madame Julie." Harry Weber tells us that Mary Nolan will open at the Mayfair Club in Philadelphia as mistress of ceremonies. By the bye, what did happen to Mary Nolan and Universal finally? Did they agree to disagree or is she going back to make other pictures?

MAGICIANS TO MEET TONIGHT

The Society of American Magicians, Boston Assembly, No. 9, will hold their "guest night" tonight. The society is composed of amateur, semi-professional and professional magicians in and around Boston. It consists of men in all walks of life who use magic either as a hobby or a profession. The officers of the society are: Leland C. Wyman, president; Herman E. Adams, vice-president; Albert G. Keller, secretary; Henry E. Bordicott, treasurer. Hardeen, who is appearing at the Lyric next week, will be among those present. An elaborate program is planned and many interesting acts of magic will be presented by the members.

The society meets the first Friday of each month at Gould Hall, Boylston pl., and always welcomes anyone who is interested in magic.

Danforth-d'Aranyi

Pauline Danforth and Yelly d'Aranyi will give a joint recital in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, March 15.

BENEFIT SHOW TOMORROW

Tomorrow will mean another opportunity to laugh with Charlie Chaplin and Our Gang, when a special movie program just for children will be sponsored by the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. The show is to be at Loew's State, through the courtesy of Manager Joseph H. Brennan. The films have been donated through the New England Film Board, so that the entire proceeds from the show may be used by this private charitable organization in its protection of neglected children.

The program will delight the hearts of children of any age, for there will be "The Circus," one of Charlie Chaplin's earlier films, "Teacher's Pet," one of the newest of the Our Gang talkies, and then an illustrated song, "Strike Up the Band," in which everyone present will joint in the chorus.

Every ticket sold will help give protection to a little child very much in need of a friend. The prices are within the reach of all. Reserved seats are $1, the remainder of the orchestra 75c, the balcony 50c and 10c. Tickets may be obtained at the box office at Loew's State, and at 43 Mt. Vernon st., Boston, Haymarket 2616.

Finishes Second

William Beaudine has completed his second two-reel Educational comedy this season for Mack Sennett. It is titled "One Yard to Go," and the cast includes Marjorie Beebe, Cyril Chadwick, Dot Farley, Frankie Eastman and Bobby Vernon.

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

OUT OF THE ASHES of "Honor Among Lovers" (if photoplays may be said to leave cindery product behind them) rises Lester Allen to uncork the fun as the center of a stage show that brings the spirit of the good old summertime and the beaches, to the Metropolitan. The flesh-and-blood captures all the honors this week, the movie being lackluster, save alone for the presence of the ever-pleasant Charlie Ruggles and the attractive Claudette Colbert. Lester's salient weakness are the story, with threadbare motivation, its poor dialogue, its jerky direction. Again we have an office romance, Fredric March as a broker, in love with his secretary, the entrancing Miss Colbert, who refuses to be taken except as a bride. So she marries Monroe Owsley, who gets rich quick but loses everything later in the market, including Mr. March's funds. Thereafter Mr. Owsley goes in for melodramatics, gets his neck pretty close to the hangman's noose and at the end owes his life, liberty and the pursuit of unhappiness solely to the unbelievably virtuous lover that Mr. March is in this case.

Lester Allen

The only way the picture could have been better than it is, would have been for Mr. Ruggles to have more to do. He squeezes all the humor possible out of his brief appearance, and makes the audience long for more of him. Miss Colbert and Mr. March struggle valiantly with their roles, but the tale, which has a number of absurdities, is like a millstone about their necks.

BUT LEAVE it to Lester Allen to make up for everything! He is a whole show in himself. He is a genuine comedian, with a merry-go-round capacity for merriment, and wise-cracks sticking out all over him like quills on a porcupine. He has stellar talent all around him, too, notably a dancer whose name is not given, and who is second only to Mr. Allen for the laurels. Other high lights are the Rath Bros., Ginger Kennedy and Marjorie and Toots Lucille, Benny Meroff shines anew, and steps his bandemen off to win plaudits in other than musical ways.

Among other good features are Mr. Geiseler and the grand orchestra; the audience loudly applauded their playing of Tschaikowsky selections.

LANGDON TOPS BOSTON BILL

RKO sends to the Keith-Boston tomorrow a group of vaudeville artists headed by Harry Langdon, talk-picture comedy star in person, who presents a skit called "After the Ball," the ball in this case being of the golf variety. Langdon is assisted by Eddie Shubert and company, the latter being two feminine foils for his fun. Miss Patricola is another of the highlights of the bill.

MISS WIEDER, GRAINGER IN RECITAL

By MOSES SMITH

GERTRUDE WIEDER, contralto, sang at Jordan Hall last night before an audience small, but friendly, while Percy Grainger was playing the piano at Symphony Hall before an audience much larger and equally cordial.

Miss Wieder, newcomer to Boston, presented a program of songs and arias by Beethoven, Bach, Handel, Brahms, Strauss, Bruch, Gretchaninoff and Chaikovsky—all in German; and three songs in English. Her voice is a true contralto, in quality as well as in range. If that part of the program we heard was a fair sample, the voice is of rich quality, the tones usually round and full, often brilliant in their lustre. She sings with admirable musicianship; she is an able and sensitive interpreter, meeting the exacting test of Brahms and Strauss. Her one major shortcoming is an uncertain technique: not all of her tones are properly "placed."

Mr. Grainger was heard in one of his original programs that ranged through Bach, Purcell, Scarlatti and Cesar Franck, and found ample place for original compositions and arrangements of others by the pianist himself. He played with his familiar extraordinary spirit. But he also gave, in the Franck "Prelude, Aria and Finale," a performance of such passionate conviction, of such admirably planned proportions combined with subtle expressiveness as we have rarely heard from him or any other pianist.

It was a pity that this impression was marred by the pianist's responding to the applause with one of his arrangements—entirely out of tune with the preceding 15 or 20 minutes.

Hampton Choir

The Hampton Institute Choir, whose Boston debut three seasons ago proved an important musical event, will return to give a concert in Symphony Hall on Tuesday evening, March 10. Their program stresses Negro Spirituals, but likewise includes various important styles of choral singing.

"Svengali"

WAR MEMOIRS OF MARSHAL FOCH

FOCH RECEIVES GERMANS AND THE ARMISTICE IS SIGNED

In yesterday's installment Marshal Foch told how the military command of the Allies laid down the military conditions of the armistice. Today he tells of meeting the German delegates and the signing of the armistice.

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH
Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies During the Closing Phases of the World War.
Translated from the French by Col. T. Bentley Mott

On November 2, 1918, the detailed examination of the terms to be imposed upon Germany commenced.

In the morning a first meeting of the heads of the Allied governments was held in Paris, at the Ministry of War. The conditions I had proposed concerning the occupation of the left bank of the Rhine were read. A discussion was then started in order to give Marshal Haig an opportunity to again develop his point of view and repeat his statements of October 25, which evidently expressed the opinion of Mr. Lloyd George and his colleague.

This proposal, which, for the purpose of suspending hostilities, would halt the Allied armies at the frontiers of Belgium, Luxenbourg and Alsace-Lorraine; that is to say, on the left bank of the Rhine and some distance from the river—in other words, with this obstacle in front of our very noses—was militarily inacceptable.

It would leave to Germany, protected as she would be by the Rhine, the possibility of reforming her armies while the conditions of peace were being discussed and the possibility, if she refused those terms, of resuming the fighting under conditions disadvantageous to the Allies

The latter might thereby lose much of the benefit of their hard-won victories. If the armistice did not give the Rhine to the Allied governments, there would be a risk of jeopardizing the peace they were seeking. My thesis was accepted.

On the afternoon of November 2 there was another session at Versailles, during which the naval conditions and those dealing with the Russian front were discussed.

At that very hour the Austrian High Command was receiving from Gen. Diaz the text of the armistice terms offered by the Entente. What was the Vienna government to do? Would it accept or not? And if it accepted, would not the disruption of the Dual Monarchy render it incapable of fulfilling its promises?

All these questions preoccupied the thought of the Allied leaders, and so heavily did they weigh upon the discussion of the afternoon that Mr. Lloyd George abandoned his naval experts and a considerable part of their demands relative to the delivery of the German war fleet.

Foch Meets Germans
Envoys Sent Through Lines to Learn Terms of Armistice

But as soon as Vienna's capitulation was known, he resumed these exigencies in their entirety. Terms are heavy that they might prove inacceptable by Germany, and thus prevent the signing of the armistice convention, which, in the matter of land conditions, would be entirely satisfactory to us

Faced with the fact that these naval clauses might be so severe as to make Germany reject our armistice, I called the attention of the Allied governments to the responsibility they would be incurring if more of our men had to be killed for so little profit to the common cause.

In reply to this, I was told to insert the naval clauses in the armistice conditions; then, if the enemy found them inacceptable, the matter of what modifications to admit would be taken under consideration. As a matter of fact, the Germans accepted everything.

Finally, on November 4, after a last reading, the definitive text of the armistice was agreed to by the heads of the Allied governments and immediately cabled to President Wilson. In addition, it was decided that, aided by a British admiral, I should be charged with communicating this text to envoys duly accredited by the German government and treating with them on the basis of its terms.

I immediately gave orders for receiving any German envoys who presented themselves at our front lines, and intending, if I was warned beforehand of their coming, to direct them along the line Givet-La Capelle-Guise. I sent special instructions to Gen. Debeney.

It was the night of November 6-7, at half-past twelve that I received the first wireless message from the German High Command. It gave the names of the plenipotentiaries designated by the Berlin government and asked that I fix a place of meeting. I replied at once in these simple words:

"If the German plenipotentiaries wish to meet Marshal Foch to ask him for an armistice, they should present themselves at the French outposts on the road Chimay-Fourmies-La Capelle-Guise. Orders have been given to conduct them to the place selected for the meeting."

Fighting Ceases
Foch Praises Armies for Saving Liberty of World

On the morning of the 7th I was informed that the German plenipotentiaries would leave Spa at noon and arrive before the French lines between 4 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Accompanied by General Weygand, three officers of my staff and the British naval delegation, headed by Admiral Wemyss, First Sea Lord of the Admiralty, I left Senlis at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and went by special train to the place chosen for meeting the German plenipotentiaries—a spot in the Compiegne forest, north of and near the station of Retbondes. My train was there run onto a siding built for railroad artillery.

It was not until 7 in the morning of November 8th that the train bringing them drew up near mine

Two hours afterward, at 9 o'clock, the first meeting took place in the office car of the French train.

In order to show the determination of the Allies to put an end to all German resistance, I sent the following telegram to the commanders-in-chief:

"The enemy, disorganized by our repeated attacks, is giving way all along the front.

"It is urgent to hasten and intensify our efforts.

"I appeal to the energy and initiative of commanders-in-chief and their armies to make the results achieved decisive."

And all of them, stirred by the breath of victory that played upon their standards, sent word in answer: "Count upon us, we will keep on as long as need be."

On November 11, at 11 a. m., firing ceased along the whole front of the Allied armies. An impressive silence followed. The nations could now see ahead a world restored to peace

"Officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers of the Allied armies:

"After having resolutely repulsed the enemy for months, you have attacked him with tireless energy and faith.

"You have won the greatest battle in history and rearned the most sacred of all causes, the liberty of the World.

"Well may you be proud!

"You have crowned your standards with an immortal glory and won the gratitude of posterity.

"Marshal of France,
"Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies.
"F. FOCH."

In accordance with the protocol which accompanied the armistice, the Allied armies were put in movement, towards the Rhine a few days later for the purpose of taking possession of the three bridgeheads at Cologne, Coblence and Mayence and occupying German territory on the left bank of the river

The armistice signed by the commander-in-chief of the Allied armies, did not constitute a peace treaty or even the preliminaries of peace. It was a suspension of hostilities which intervened in the course of a certain time for the purpose of stopping bloodshed and giving the belligerent countries the time required for drawing up a treaty of peace.

To guarantee to these governments the possibility of duly carrying out this task, the Allied armies and their commanders agreed to halt their operations under condition which rendered the military situation sufficiently advantageous to prevent any resistance on the part of the enemy to the intentions of the Allied governments and to the peace terms they might dictate

The Rhine was an obstacle under the protection of which Germany might have jeopardized the victories of our armies, reconstituted her forces and then proceeded to discuss conditions of peace. But now the Allies were going to hold the Rhine. They were even going to hold both banks

Here they were in a position, if need arose, to resume their advance and put a stop to any difficulties which the German Government might seek to create

Moreover, the occupation of the Rhineland by virtue of the armistice constituted a mortgage in the hands of the Allies such as would guarantee the payment of the indemnities they had decided to claim

Moreover, it must not be imagined that the signing of the armistice was premature on our part or that we might have derived advantage from delaying it some days or even some weeks until such time as the German defeat had been finally sealed by a military disaster equivalent to a new Sedan. In what concerns this point I have described in preceding pages the results we had a right to expect from the attack already to be launched east of the Moselle on November 14. These results would have been, after a victorious start, to extend by yet another 20 miles our combat front, already stretching for 200 miles and along which, up to that moment, we had been waging a successful battle from the North Sea to Lorraine. But the nature of this frontal assault could in no way have modified the situation to our ultimate profit

In tomorrow's installment in the Boston Evening American, Marshal Foch tells of the march to the Rhine and the peace regulations.

AL CAPONE SMILES—WHY?

HE FACES ANOTHER TERM

There seems to be no immediate reason for Al Capone, Chicago gangster, to smile, as Al is facing six months in prison for contempt of court. He is also facing numerous vagrancy charges. Not long ago he finished a year stretch at "Cherry Hill," Philadelphia. He's chatting with Assistant State's Attorney Frank Mast, in Chicago. (International Newsreel photo.)

Reds Doom Driver of Wrecked Train

Moscow, March 6 (AP)—M. Bagalsky, a locomotive engineer held responsible for a railroad wreck in Eastern Siberia, today was sentenced to be shot and 12 members of his train crew were sent to prison for three to ten years

In the wreck inquiry government investigators contended that this and numerous similar incidents in the past year were the result of sabotage

RECORD PLANE FOR LINDBERGH IS READY

Burbank, Cal., March 6 (AP)—With one speed mark already to the credit of its sister ship, a swift monoplane which may assault other air records, waited today for Charles A. Lindbergh

Embodying a combined retractable landing gear-streamlining feature that is the product of the flying colonel's brain, a trim Lockheed Sirius plane proved its mettle yesterday in the first long test flight made since the Lindbergh idea was adopted.

With a test pilot at the controls, the ship sped from Oakland to Burbank—estimated 350 miles airline—in 1 hour and 33 minutes, lowering the previous mark of the hop almost 20 minutes. A similar plane with a higher-powered engine is awaiting Lindbergh's pleasure.

"Col. Lindbergh's suggestion that landing gears should be retractable and slide up into the wing while in flight, increased the speed of the plane from Oakland to this port by about 25 miles per hour," Russell Perk, superintendent of the Lockheed plant said. "Col. Lindbergh's new ship is powered with a 650-horsepower engine. Lindbergh can go after any of the commercial records now, if he cares to," Sreese said.

How Could Ship Sail Up Hill?

New York, March 6 (AP)—Wilbur Glenn Voliva, owner and overlord of the religious Zion City, Ill., presented "proof" today that the earth is flat. Here is it

"If the earth were a globe, there would have to be eight inches curvature in the first mile from any given point, 32 inches curvature in two miles, ten and a half feet curvature in four miles. The curvature increases as a square of the distance. In 400 miles the curvature would amount to 20.2 miles.

"A ship or train might be able to slide down such a hill, but can you imagine how you would ever get it up the other side?"

COLDS
Break Up in a Jiffy
This Quick Way

Feel Like A New Man Almost Before You Know It

People have found out that new fangled ideas and notions don't break up colds. So millions have turned back to first principles and use what they know breaks one up in a jiffy. Even a "little" cold is too dangerous to trifle with

The thing to do is to get Hill's Cascara Quinine at any drug store. Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all.

Soon you'll start to feel like a new person. Things will loosen up, your head will clear; aching go—you'll be back on the job with a wallop

Get Hill's now. It is a scientific formula made to do one thing well: to knock a cold—not to cure a thousand ailments. Get your money back if it doesn't work with twice the speed of anything else you've ever tried.

AT THE LISTENING POST

A PHRASE that very nearly reached the proportion of an epidemic among announcers was the one "and now we bring you—" Recently we note that the "and now" has been replaced with "good old—" In a scramble to be spontaneous, the men at the mike seem to have adopted this bit of 20th century slang as a sort of complimentary reference to everything. Almost nightly we hear "good old so and so will now sing that good old song that was popular back in those good old days." It clicked for a while, but like everything else, it is being carried too far. Being original is not easy, but it surely helps those who can manage to be so.

Air Features

When Tony Canzoneri, world's lightweight champion, meets Sammy Fuller, pride of the North End, in the Boston Garden tonight, the bout will be broadcast from WLEX and the Yankee network at 10 p. m. Gerry Harrison will give a round by round description of the affair which involves the largest purse ever paid at the Garden.

A symphony orchestra and a cast of actors participate in a current event series, "The March of Time," which makes its debut over WNAC at 10:30 tonight. The music, which will serve as a curtain between each episode, will be selected to provide appropriate atmosphere, while each scene will otherwise be "set" by a narrator, the Voice of Time, who will designate the time and locality and prepare the listener for the dramatized news events to follow.

COMING OUT OF THE ETHER . . . The "Charleston," the "Black Bottom," the "Lindy Hop"—all make way for the latest leg urge, the Boston Breakaway, named for our city. This new dance will be described by Arthur Murray over WBZA at 8:45 tonight . . . After an absence of what seems like an age, the original piano twins, Ohman and Arden, return to the air over WBZA at 8 tonight . . . Earle Nelson features a special number for his Canadian friends on the Fox Fur Trappers on WLEI at 10 this evening. It is "By the River Sainte Marie." On the same program John Herrick will render musical comedy hits . . . The new Capitol Family program makes its bow over a WEAF network at 7 tonight. Graham McNamee will announce the program, which features many old and new "Family" artists.—M. G. M.

Russian Flapper Just Like All the Rest

Moscow, March 6 (AP)—Flappers still exist in Russia and they flap in much the same way as they used to in Paris and New York.

They attend Saturday night dances at the Grand Hotel garbed in the longest, tightest and silliest dresses they can devise. On the streets the Russian flapper wears the shortest of short skirts and Russian boots or rubber.

Radio for Private Profit Is Barred

Washington, March 6 (INS)—Ellis A. Yost, chief examiner for the Federal Radio Commission, today recommended the commission deny the application of Norman Baker, operator of station KTNT, Muscatine, Ia., for a renewal of his broadcasting license.

Baker had failed to establish that a renewal of the license would be in the public interest, Yost held. The station subordinated the interests of the listening public to the interests of the licensee, the examiner said.

MOTHER IN COURT FIGHT FOR $20,000 INSURANCE

Bought Snappy Clothes for Spouse, Wife Says

Hank Asks Anne to Be His Wife

What Has Gone Before

Louie Scorpio, called "Slaughterhouse," champion steer killer of the stockyards and winner of the revolver prize at the butchers' annual picnic, joins the bootleg racket run by Johnny Franks. His decision is clinched by the appearance at Franks' cafe of "Peaches," a beauty of the underworld. The gang invades the territory of Joe Colimo, a rival racketeer, with a truckload of beer. Fight ensues, in which Colimo's brother is killed. Colimo puts Scorpio "on the spot," but fails to kill him. The latter returns to the steak house and shoots Franks to death, becoming the leader. "The Secret Six" is organized to fight crime. Scorpio's gang wins out in the election for mayor. He scorns the love of Peaches.

CHAPTER 13

Scorpio Goes After Colimo

"KID," HE REMARKED, "I told you that I'd make a hot shot out of you some of these days. You've been sticking around and shown that you have a head on you. I have found out that I can trust you—and now you're going to be one of the gang in earnest."

The flattered boy fairly swelled with pride.

"Gee, Mr. Scorpio—that's great of you!"

"Tonight," went on Scorpio, "you're going out on your first job—a sweet job. A hundred bucks in it, kid. Just follow the Dummy—he'll tip you off." He indicated the waiting Mets, and pressed the sawed-off revolver into the boy's eager hand.

Mets exchanged a knowing glance with Scorpio, and moved swiftly and silently down the stairs and into the street—the eager boy at his heels.

Raw Deal

Scorpio looked meditatively after the disappearing deaf mute and the boy. He liked that boy —still here he was, sending him to his death. For, as soon as the boy had done what he was bidden, the silent Mets would seal his lips forever—with a bullet. Then the gang leader shrugged. After all, it was all in the game. That's what they took boys into the gang for — to shoot, throw away the weapon and run — and be "bumped off" by another gangster, lest they "squeal." It was a good system.

Entering the steak house again, he met Miszoski, all dressed and ready for the party. The two grinned.

"That Carson gang will be pretty sore, I guess," remarked the Gouger.

"Sure," rejoined Scorpio. Both men turned to congratulatory followers.

Carl, closeted with the boss, Markham, after the meeting of the Secret Six, was briefly apprised of the result of the Centre election and what it meant, and, with these facts in mind, had started for the Scorpio headquarters when he bumped into Hank, apparently on the same errand.

Stared at Hank

"Well," remarked Carl, "Scorpio will have plenty to say now—he'll got a real earful." Hank eyed his companion. "I think I'll ride that big ape, he remarked. "This is a pretty raw deal—and, Carl, I don't like to preach or give advice—but aren't you getting pretty deep with them?"

Carl shrugged his shoulders. "Didn't I read a story by you, white-washing that outfit," he parried.

"That was a couple of months ago—before I got next," insisted Hank. "But I've changed my mind since I've seen a few things around that dump. I like you, Carl—and I've worried. You know it's not in the newspaper game—getting tarred with that brush. Some day they'll have you in a spot where you'll have to sell out your papers—"

"It looks to me," interrupted Carl, "as though you're kind of fallen for that blonde at the cashier's desk, and are a little jealous

Neighbors

(Read Luke 10:25-37. Text, Luke 10:29.) And who is my neighbor?

The most cruel punishment ever devised was solitary confinement. Its victims went insane, for they had no neighbors. Robinson Crusoe is not a boy's book; it is an attempt to solve the problem of solitude without sacrificing reason. The philosophic ingenuity of DeFoe failed, and he had to bring in the man Friday. One of the evils of great cities is that they give us people but not neighbors. In the cures of the country we have neighbors who can share our joys and sorrows, and who are always ready with their help in time of trouble. There speech is more rare, but also more intimate and sacred. To have a neighbor is to find the way to our sweetest joys.

"And sweet it is
To sit, echoing spirit with singing spirit,
Above the dust of time and circumstance,
And hear, in the lone hour of delight,
The sacred things that man hath said to man
For comfort of his sad and wondering heart."

PRAYER: Our Father, who art the Father of all, give us the grace of friendship, and lead us in the way of kindness toward all thy children, especially to those in need. In Jesus' name. Amen

PAID FOR AUTOS BESIDES, SAYS CAPE WOMAN

Beauty Shop Owner in Suit to Win Back $20,000 in Real Estate

Barnstable, March 6—When John, A. Jason, Hyannis policeman, wanted a fur coat, he went to Boston and picked it out, depending upon her to pay the bill of $695, his wife, Mrs. Louise Jason, Hyannis beauty shop proprietor, testified here in her equity suit against him.

She paid, she said, as she had previously done on his notes for two automobiles, and bills for three expensive suits.

The Hyannis woman is suing to have a deed to $20,000 real estate here set aside on the grounds that she was fraudulently induced to sign it. She insisted she had intended to give him her property after her death, but Jason has a deed giving him joint interest with her.

She first married Jason, who was then on the Falmouth police force, in 1926. In the winter of 1928 while he was on the Miami, Fla., police force, she secured a divorce in Reno. Last summer they became reconciled.

Mrs. Jason admitted that she offered Jason an allowance of $100 per month and interest in her property if he would resign from the police force and marry her again.

PUBLIC SHARES $500,000 WILL

Public bequests and generous gifts to relatives are made in the will of Mrs. Alice M. T. Beach of Randolph, filed today for probate in Norfolk Probate Court and showing an estate of at least $500,000.

A gift of $5000 is made to the Massachusetts General Hospital and gifts of $1000 each to the New England Hospital for Women, the Free Hospital for Women, the Episcopal City Mission and the First Congregational Church of Randolph.

RELATIVES ALL SHARE

Seth T. Crawford, her nephew, is left $100,000 outright and a house and land at Westport Harbor, with the personal property contained on the premises. His wife is left $1000 outright, and their three children are given $15,000 each.

For a niece, Judith N. Crawford of Pasadena, Cal., the will creates a trust fund of $100,000, the interest to be paid the niece until her death, and thereafter to her issue.

Mrs Beach's husband, Edwin H Beach is given $6,000 outright and the will also creates for him a trust fund of $100,000, the income to be paid him annually. After his death the principal will be divided between the nephew and niece.

EMPLOYE GETS $300

What jewelry, furniture, books and other like personal property the husband does not desire, goes to the niece.

A stepdaughter of the testatrix, Edith R. Foster of Concord, N. H., receives $1000, and a like amount goes to Alice R. Borden of Plainville, N. J.

Peter Carroll of Randolph, an employe, also benefits, receiving $300 from the will. The rest and residue of the estate are divided between the nephew and niece.

ART OF MAKEUP

Edith Parker, Junior League and Vincent Club member, has become an expert in makeup since she gave up gay society life to devote herself to a stage career. At present, she is filling the role of a maiden aunt in "Heritage" at the Copley.

SOCIETY GIRL STAGE STAR

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

If you are a society girl, you can do most anything and get away with it, but on the stage, well—

Take it from Miss Edith Parker Junior League and Vincent Club member, it is no easy matter, she confided between acts at the Copley Theater.

Unbelieving managers doubt the society girl's interest and sincerity.

The necessity of unrestrained emotions in successfully portraying a dramatic part forces the debutante to unlearn all the "lady-like" and "truly feminine" restraint years of family background and social position have imposed upon her.

This and more, make it hard sledding for the society girl to forge ahead in the theatrical field which today is enveloping in its glamor and attraction scores of "blue-book" girls.

For two years Miss Parker daughter of Mrs. J. Harleston Parker of Commonwealth ave., has "tread the boards." It hasn't been so hard. But it hasn't been so easy, either.

Comedy roles are Miss Parker's forte. Her bit performance of "Gertie's Galosses" was one of the outstanding parts of the Vincent Club show recently.

"If you want to know the truth, society girls entering upon a stage career as a rule keep their identities secret," she confided.

She had just come off the stage at the conclusion of the first act, her chestnut-bob powdered white, and her young face artificially lined with age.

"Don't think it is easy for a society girl to walk into a role," she be[illegible]

"I walked from one office to another for three weeks before I obtained my first engagement. And when that was over, I canvassed theatrical offices for six weeks before the second one came my way."

AWAITING THE CURTAIN CALL

Miss Parker enjoys a short smoke in her dressing room at the Copley Theater, where she fills a major role in the current presentation. Miss Parker finds, she says, that a social register listing isn't much help when you're striving for success on the stage.

SON SUICIDE COMPANY CLAIMS

Husband of Rich Contractor's Daughter Is Found Dead on Nebraska Ranch

A federal court jury today was called upon to decide whether Frederick W. Ruisseau, of Brookline, son-in-law of Patrick McGovern, millionaire contractor, died by accident or suicide on a Nebraska ranch in 1929.

The question was the vital issue in the $20,000 suit of Ruisseau's mother, Mrs. Mary H. Ruisseau, of Brookline, against the Connecticut General Life Insurance Co.

The company contends Ruisseau shot himself and so invalidated a $20,000 insurance policy on his life, a policy in which his mother was named beneficiary.

Mrs. Ruisseau and other witnesses testified in support of the official finding on the death, which was accidental.

FOUND DEAD IN CORRAL

Ruisseau, it was testified, was found dead in a corral at the Holy Rosary Mission Ranch, Gordan, Neb., with a rifle shot wound in his abdomen.

He had been living there with his wife, who was Miss Mary G. McGovern of Great Neck, N. Y., daughter of the contractor who built the Boston and New York subways and who is a bidder in the East Boston tunnel project.

The defense contention was that Ruisseau killed himself because of ill health which led him to establish a residence in Nebraska.

The rifle from which the death shot was fired was shown the jury and Capt. Charles W. Ambaugh, state police firearms expert, was a witness.

TWO COMPANIES PAID

The case of the plaintiff involved the evidence that Ruisseau had been target shooting. Ten depositions from Nebraska residents were read.

It was also brought out that the Aetna and John Hancock insurance companies had paid insurance on Ruisseau's life.

Ruisseau, Georgetown University and Dartmouth College graduate, married Miss McGovern in New York in 1924. They went West in 1929.

Francis P. Garland and Bernard Berenson were counsel for Mrs. Ruisseau. John Hall represented the insurance company. The case was given to the jury before noon.

2 YOUTHS HELD IN THEFT PLOT

A young man who had elaborate plans for robbing a lunch room, who had a billy strapped to his belt and who carried an imitation revolver, was picked up with a friend in Charlestown today.

Patrolmen Frederick J. Becherer arrested the pair as suspicious persons after watching them for some time.

The robbery plans, with the lunch room exit carefully marked on the drawn plan, was found on him at Charlestown station by Capt. William W. Livingston.

The suspect said he lived in Grant st., Haverhill, while his friend, on whom nothing incriminating was found, said he came from Brooklyn three days ago to look for work.

LEGION WOMEN AID VETS

BLAKE LAUDS AMERICAN

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION
UNITED STATES VETERANS BUREAU
Boston, Massachusetts. March 4, 1931.
THIS LETTER REFERS TO YOUR FILE NUMBER
IN REPLY REFER TO: BH-59

The Editor,
The Boston American,
Boston, Massachusetts.

Dear Sir:

I want to thank you very much for the material contribution which the Boston American has made to the work of expediting Veterans' Loans on Adjusted Service Certificates by furnishing this office with 30,000 Application Blanks printed at your own expense on the Boston American presses to be distributed to the veterans throughout Massachusetts.

This latest demonstration of your constructive and material helpfulness is appreciated by every veteran to whom these blanks have been of assistance in expediting the relief which was intended by the Congress.

Your thoughtfulness in this regard and the help which this action has been to them in expediting the granting of their loans is typical of your continued interest in their behalf.

Very truly yours,

WILLIAM J. BLAKE,
Regional Manager.

BOSTON AMERICAN'S AID TO VETS APPRECIATED

A thank-you to the Boston Evening American from William J. Blake, regional manager in Boston, of the Veterans' Bureau. "Constructive and material helpfulness" is the way Mr. Blake classifies the work this paper has done in aiding veterans with their loan papers.

VETERANS NOT IN NEED OF LOAN WAIT

Many inquiries are being made at the Boston Evening American loan bureau, 5 Winthrop sq., by World War veterans relative to interest on the loans they seek on certificates.

The rate of interest is 4½ per cent. If a man borrows $100, the interest will be $4.50 a year. If no payment is made interest will then be charged on the loan, making a total of $104.50. This will continue from year to year.

A large number of ex-service men who have called at the Boston Evening American bureau are doubtful whether it is advisable to borrow money on their certificates. These are veterans who do not require the money for immediate needs, and when they find most of the other half of their money will be eaten up in interest they decide to wait until they are actually in need.

HUNDREDS IN NEED

The American's loan bureau continues to be a boon to workers who do not wish to lose a day's pay by filing applications. They send their wives, mothers and other relatives in and these messengers are assisted in making out the applications.

Many veterans who believe they will not live until their bonus certificates mature in 1945 are applying for the full amount due them now. One ex-service man explained that he expects to be dead long before his certificate matures in 1945.

MUCH WELFARE WORK

A large amount of welfare work is being done by the patriotic women assisting at the American's bureau.

Mrs. Josephine H O'Donnell, president of Suffolk County Council American Legion Auxiliary, took one veteran who was not eligible to borrow to City Hall and arranged soldiers' relief for him.

Other women who are doing excellent work at the American bureau in behalf of veterans include Miss Catherine Dermody of Falmouth st., Back Bay, and Mrs. Mary Ramberg of Hallam st., Dorchester, president of All-Dorchester Auxiliary, American Legion.

The Boston Evening American bureau will be open daily from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., main floor, 5 Winthrop sq. At this bureau veterans will receive application blanks and instructions for filling them out and filling them with the Veterans' Bureau.

REFUSED LOAN

Harry Balikian, of Bradford st., South End, who, on application for loan, was informed that his certificate had been voided in Washington because he was discharged under alienage. (Staff photos.)

VET WILL FIGHT LOAN BAN

Fearing a War Department ruling may effect his citizenship, Harry Balikian of 3 Bradford st., South End today planned a personal appeal to Washington to retain his honorable war-time service.

Balikian discovered his predicament when he applied for a veterans loan and was told his certificate was voided in Washington because he was discharged under alienage. He was born in Turkey, but became naturalized here six years ago.

He served 13 months, from October 5, 1917, to ten days after the armistice, and produced an honorable discharge when he visited the office of the Boston Evening American.

"The United States Court gave me citizenship on this honorable discharge," he said, "and I tried to give honorable service in the army. I was not opposed to service and made absolutely no objections.

"No cloud was ever it when I got it and I'm sorry that such a ruling should be made now," he said.

Balikian was given a formal demand for the return of $105, a first loan on his bonus certificate, together with a ruling of the adjutant-general of the War Department at Washington that he was not entitled to the certificate.

CASEY DEFENDS CITY CENSOR PLAN

The fate of the bill to do away with Boston's present method of censoring plays rested with the House committee on cities today following a lengthy hearing.

Referring to "Strange Interlude," Casey denied that the play had been banned here.

"Those contemplating the production of O'Neill's play interviewed the mayor and he said they had a perfect right to present it and act on the finding of the board as to whether or not it was fit for the play to continue," he said. "That the play was and produced here shows that the producers did not believe it a fit play."

Sidney Grant and Samuel Augoff, co-authors of a series of legal studies on censorship for the B. U. law review, both spoke in favor of the bill.

"Censorship in the hands of the mayor, as at present, makes him a dictator, giving him power to impose any changes in a play he desires," said Atty. Grant. "There is a criminal statute which says the showing of any obscene play is punishable by fine or imprisonment. Why isn't that sufficient?"

Atty. Augoff stated that since the appointment in 1904 of Casey, "hundreds of plays have been either warned away or changed."

Waltham Reserve Officers Promoted

Mayor Patrick J. Duane of Waltham yesterday promoted Reserve Officers Joseph F. Hill, Joseph J. Wilson and Francis F. Tuite to the rank of regular patrolmen. To fill two of the three vacancies in the reserve force caused by the promotion, Mayor Duane appointed Francis A. Dacey of 72 Exchange st. and Francis J. Fitzpatrick of 26 River st. as reserve officers.

COBBLER TURNS SNOW ARTIST

Ugo Ubertini, 1039 Hyde Park ave., Hyde Park, may be a cobbler by trade, but yesterday he did a pretty good job of snow sculpturing. After the storm was over Ugo and his helper, John Colontoni, went out for a bit of fun in the snow. They started out to make a snow man and after an hour's play had a frozen gentleman that was a dead ringer for Abraham Lincoln.

During the day hundreds of motorists stopped to admire the sidewalk art of the cobbler and his helper. Little boys, who usually love to "bust up" snow men, protected the frozen statue of Lincoln and stood by telling everyone that old Ugo, the cobbler, had done the work.

The men gave their names as George O Brien, 25, of Hooker ave., and George Frazier, 32, of Cleveland st., both of Braintree.

GIRL STOWAWAY CAUGHT HERE

The first girl stowaway to reach Boston in many years arrived here yesterday but got no further. She is 27-year-old Rosella Katz, from Soviet Russia, who was found by immigration officers on board the German steamer Elsa Mersell when that vessel arrived with a cargo of iron ore for the Mystic Iron Works of Everett.

The girl was found hiding in the hold of the ship, which she said she boarded at Nicolaieff, Russia. It is believed that she was secreted aboard by a member of the crew.

She was taken to the Ellis Island Boston immigration station, where she will be given a hearing. It is probable that she will be sent back to Russia.

CRAM FORGETS LECTURE DATE AT LIBRARY

550 Assembled to Hear Talk on Greek Pilgrims Left in the Lurch

"Did you ever hear the one about the absent-minded professor that—"

Ralph Adams Cram is not a professor, but he fits into this story just as well as one.

Cram, of architectural and lecture fame, to use his own words, "slipped up" on a lecture, it was learned today, and left 500 persons in the lurch last night at Boston Public Library.

The master of church architecture, former head of the Boston planning board and numerous other titles just forgot the lecture.

He said so today in an explanation to Charles F. D. Belden, library director, with whom he made arrangements for a talk on the "Greek and Byzantian Pilgrimage," Belden said:

"Mr. Cram wrote me today that he slipped up on the date, and we hope to have the lecture at a later date."

Cram, through his secretary, referred the curious to Director Belden, who explained:

BEQUESTS LEFT TO HOSPITALS

The will of Frank J. Kennedy, well-known Boston merchant, who died Wednesday, has been filed for probate in the Norfolk County Probate Court in Dedham, the bulk of the estate going to members of the family, and to various hospitals throughout the city.

According to the terms of the will the home at 137 Clinton rd., Brookline, and household effects are bequeathed to Mrs. Phoebe H. Kennedy, the widow. In addition the sum of $100,000 in cash is given her.

The sum of $150,000 is also bequeathed to Mrs. Rudy A. Kennedy, a daughter, and $50,000 to William J. Kennedy, a son-in-law. Both bequests are cash.

The other bequests are:

St. Elizabeth's Hospital, $100,000; Free Hospital for Women, Brookline, $25,000; Boston Floating Hospital, $25,000; Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, $25,000, and the New England Deaconess Hospital, $25,000.

The remainder of the estate, the total sum of which is not estimated in the will filed yesterday, is to be held in trust, the trustees to invest this money and pay six-tenths of the income to the widow of the merchant as long as she lives, and four-tenths to the daughter during her lifetime.

Feminine Fashions in the Spotlight

What the well dressed Mrs. and misses of Boston will wear in feminine fineries this spring will be discussed next week in a series of articles by Amoa Parrish, the internationally known fashion authority. The first article will be published in the next Boston Sunday Advertiser. Subsequent fashion features will appear each day next week in the Boston American.

What are fashion's favored colors, will dresses be longer or shorter, what is in vogue in hats, and other subjects will be discussed during "Fashion Week."

FEAR FOR THEIR HOME

SIX DRIVEN OUT IN JAMAICA PLAIN FIRE

Six persons, including three children, were driven out and the Amory st. section of Jamaica Plain was threatened early today when a two-alarm blaze raced through the warehouse of Walter Curley & Son, builders, at No. 416

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Todd, who live next door, led their three children to the street when the flames threatened their house, and William Tibbetts, resident of another floor, also fled.

The fire started on the first floor of the 2½-story wooden warehouse. It had gained considerable headway when fire apparatus arrived and gave the firemen a stubborn battle. The cause was undetermined and damage was estimated at $10,000.

When sparks threatened homes in Brookside ave., nearby, many persons packed their belongings and were ready to leave. They included Edward and Irene Berry and Bernice Philbin, Brookside ave children.

LOVE DIES AMID GOLD

WOES LAID TO "ROWDY" WAYS

Mrs. Grace Draper Charlot, Boston bluebood, granddaughter of William F. Draper, former ambassador to Italy, and grandniece of the late Governor Eben S. Draper, has filed suit for divorce at Reno, Nev. She charges her husband, Harry, embarrassed her by bringing "rowdies" to his home at unearthly hours. The Drapers are very rich.

CHARLOT SUED FOR DIVORCE

It was bad enough when he came home late, but he made it worse by towing a coterie of rowdies in his wake, Mrs. Grace Draper Charlot of Boston declared in filing divorce papers at Reno, Nev., against Harry Charlot of New York, according to dispatches today.

Mrs. Charlot, granddaughter of the late William F. Draper, former ambassador to Italy, and grandniece of the late Governor Eben S. Draper, was married in Kentucky to Charlot, her first cousin, in a 1923 elopement.

She left him in 1928, she cites in the divorce papers, when they were living at Whiteside, N. Y., but returned on his promise to mend his ways.

His promise was soon forgotten, according to the wife, who said she suffered much embarrassment because of the "carryings on" of his "rowdy friends."

It will be a brilliant social affair, as well as one of interest to the reserve officers for military reasons. The other feature of the social program will be bridge at the Wachusett Country Club for the women Saturday afternoon. Mayor O'Hara will be the speaker at the dinner in the evening.

CURLEY SEEKS CITY RELIEF

Measures for relief of welfare departments of cities and towns by the State were urged today by Mayor Curley and other city officials in a two-hour conference in the office of Governor Ely.

With Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman and City Auditor Rupert S. Carven, the mayor was in conference with the Governor, Tax Commission Henry F. Long, Gaparr G. Bacon, president of the Senate, and Speaker Leverett Saltonstall of the House.

At the end of the conference Mayor Curley told reporters the measures sought are for temporary relief in view of the alarming rise in welfare expenditures required for Boston.

100 PER CENT INCREASE

"The demand this year is 100 per cent more than in 1930," Mayor Curley said.

"And 1930 was the most drawn upon in this history of the city.

"We discussed a number of plans based on bills now before the Legislature, the legal aspects of which will be handled later by Corporation Counsel Silverman and Tax Commissioner Long.

"It would be asking too much for the State to handle all the welfare burdens permanently but I feel it could take half of it temporarily, at least.

STATE ROADS BURDEN.

"He said he urged that the state highway burden on cities and towns be abolished in view of legislation on the increase in gasoline taxes. A bill for an increase of one cent in this tax was reported favorably this week by the House committee on ways and means.

"The abolition of this burden would make available these funds for other work, welfare if needed," the mayor said.

"Boston would only profit $300,000, a small part of its welfare bill, but the move, but other communities would be aided materially," he said.

GALLAGHER HIT IN SCHOOL ROW

Oscar C. Gallagher, superintendent of schools in Brookline, whose refusal to quit his post has created a bitter controversy, is charged with inefficiency by Sidney D. Strickland, a member of the Brookline School Board.

Strickland sided with Dr. Thomas P. Kendrick, defeated for re-election to the school board, who made the original charges against Gallagher. Gallagher has denied the charges, and last night declined to reply to the latest attack upon him.

Strickland and Dr. Kendrick urge an open investigation of the affairs of the Brookline school board as conducted by the present superintendent.

According to Dr. Kendrick, no forward step is possible for the schools of Brookline until the branch of the school system with which Supt. Gallagher is connected is changed.

5th Operation Fails to Dim Boy's Smile

With his room at the City Hospital filled with flowers, fruit, books and games, 12-year-old Frank O Brien of South Boston, the "sunshine patient," declared he had plenty to smile about and refused to consider that his fifth major operation, from which he is recovering, amounted to anything at all.

"It seems as though the whole world had tried to be nice this week," he said, waving his hand toward scores of presents sent to him from all parts of the city.

TODAY'S TRUE STORY

She Drives Into Love

NAN SIMMONS doesn't drive a car any more. She hasn't driven one since the day when—but that's the end of the story. Let's start at the beginning.

Nan's father gave her a car when she was 18. In six months she had wrecked it. Then he gave her another, and with it he gave her a warning—no more speeding. But Nan could no more drive a car without speeding than she could live without laughing. Because that's the way she looked on life, as something to be enjoyed.

The first time she was arrested for speeding she was fined $10. The second offense brought a $50 fine. On her third appearance in court after a long interval the judge scanned her record and said: "One hundred dollars and costs. And the next time you come in here on the same charge you're going to jail. I also suspend your license for six months."

Nan didn't laugh at that, though Hawley Talbott did. He had accompanied her to court, and when they got outside he said, "Don't pay any attention to that old bird. He won't jail you."

"Better not, Nan," cautioned Hal Preston in reply to Talbott's advice. "Judge Smoot means what he says."

Hal had also accompanied Nan to court. He was with her whenever he could be. For more than a year there had been an air of spoken rivalry between himself and Talbott. Both had proposed to her and both were waiting for her answer, waiting for her to choose between them. Hal knew that Talbott "knocked" him to Nan, telling her, "What do you see in him? He'll never be able to give you the things I can give you."

Which was true. Talbott was wealthy enough to give Nan anything she wanted. Just now he was giving her the car she wanted to hear, advice to ignore the judge's warning and suspension of her license.

"Oh, Hal, you're an old goops," she said, "if I get in trouble again, Hawley will get me out of it. Won't you, Hawley?"

"Exactly the thing in the world, Nan," answered Talbott. "I've got my car here and you can drive it home."

Hal didn't say anything as Nan got behind the wheel and he and Talbott entered the big front seat beside her. Nan shot the car away from the curb and headed for her suburban home. Hardly was she free of the dense traffic before the speedometer crept over the speed limit.

"That's the stuff, Nan," said Talbott. "Give her the gas."

Fifteen minutes later they were in the suburbs and the car was streaking along at 60 miles an hour. Talbott was leaning over whispering confidentially to Nan as Hal silently watched the road ahead.

It was he who first saw the other car. But even as he saw it it was on them, shooting out of a side road. There was no time to shout a warning. Automatically his hand went out and jammed on the emergency brake. Their own car swerved and that is what saved them. The other machine, instead of striking them squarely, hit only a glancing blow and then smashed into an electric light post.

Glancing though the blow it was enough to overturn Talbott's car.

The next few minutes were a horrible daze to Hal.

"How about the fellow in the other car?" he asked. He had the roar of a motorcycle drowned his words.

Hal, looking at Nancy saw her face go white. He knew that she had suddenly realized what faced her—certain jail, perhaps for years. For the man in the other car was dead.

The policeman repeated his question. Hal looked at Talbott, but the latter continued to taub the slight cut on his chin and turned slightly away.

"I was driving the car," said Hal.

Nan put up her hand, attempted to speak and then fainted. Hal caught her as she fell.

"She was hit on the head," he told the policeman. "But she'll be all right in a few minutes."

Nan was all right when, several hours later, Hal came to her home. She had been waiting anxiously.

"What happened?" she asked. "If you have to go to jail I won't let you—I'll tell the truth —tell them I was driving."

Hal took both her hands in his. "Let me tell you something first," he said. "You're never going to drive a car again until I tell you to. Do you promise?"

Nan nodded her head.

"But tell me what happened," she insisted. "Will they send you to jail for—for murder?"

Hal took her in his arms and she nestled there contentedly.

"I would have gone to jail for you," he said, "but I'm glad I don't have to. It wasn't my fault—your fault. Do you know who was in the other car?"

Without waiting for her to answer, he went on:

"A bandit," he said. "He had just held up a store and that motorcycle policeman was chasing him. The policeman testified to how fast the other car was going and they let me go. They even wanted to congratulate me."

All names of characters in this story are fictitious.

She's Too Young to Worry

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I read your column every day and since you seem to have helped so many people I hope you can help me. I am 15 years old and a junior in a public high school. All of my friends go with boys and have a good time. I have no boy friend, not even a prospect. I am very self-conscious and can never think of anything to say. When I go, it is usually something I shouldn't. I don't dance very well, but I make rather good marks in school. The younger boys, 12 or 13, are the ones who seem to fall for me, and even they don't fall very hard. If they did they are too young to go places and have a good time. LONELY CHRIS.

Dear Chris: Aren't you a wee bit young to be worrying that you have "no boy friend, not even a prospect"? If you began having dates now, think how bored and perhaps "hard boiled" you might become in a couple of years. Learn to dance, not only well but perfectly. By the time you're 17 or so, you won't want for partners. As for being self-conscious and not being able to think of anything to say, that's just youth. Keep up on subjects that interest young people—like theatricals, movies, athletic contests—and read the newspapers.

What's He Angry About?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

My boy friend asked me to go for a ride some weeks ago and I refused. He told me then he would be unable to visit me till month after next. So I haven't spoken to him since, and my girl friend asked him several times what it all meant but he refused to tell her. He has a new girl friend now; he was going with her sometimes when we had our quarrel. WORRIED.

Dear Worried: It looks to me, my dear Worried, as if the other girl has supplanted you in the boy friend's affections. It was up to you to accept or refuse to go motoring with the boy, but it was silly to stop speaking to him.

Carrying the Schoolgirl's Books

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I go around with a boy who toes not go to the same school that I attend. He called for me one afternoon and we had a dispute about my books. He thinks that as soon as a girl starts to walk with a boy she should hand him her books. I think she should not. I think he should ask the girl if he may carry her books.

Who is right? PEGGY.

You are right, Peggy. This young gallant may think that a girl should at once hand him her books to carry, but I'm sure that most gallants would consider this a bit "forward."

Appreciation for the Surprise Party

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

If your friends give you a birthday surprise party, what would be the proper thing to say to show your appreciation and thanks? J.

"How very kind you were to plan this lovely party for me. Thank you so much. I have never been so touched in my life; it has been an evening of the most beautiful memories"

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers).

What's In Style for Rooms

By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, March 6—Slip covers—are they something to slip onto the furniture in the summer to protect the upholstery from sun and dust?

Maybe that's where the idea came from originally. But today they're something to slip onto the furniture to brighten up a room at any time of year.

Slip covers this spring are often an important part of a room's decorative scheme. Andy not only this spring—but at any time of year when you feel the urge to change things about and make your room look different.

The decorating principles you use in choosing slip covers are just the same as those you use in choosing upholsteries for various pieces of furniture.

Two pieces covered alike and one different is one good way. Or all the pieces may be different—provided there is color harmony among them all.

Draperies as Keynote

And a good way to start is to take your draperies as the keynotes and build your slip cover plan around them. Then you're sure of an harmonious ensemble.

If your draperies are a gay floral print, for example, and it's possible to match it, one of the big chairs can be covered in the same pattern.

Suppose it has a deep tan ground with a pattern of rose-red, blue-green, yellow and blue. The cover for the big chair would be particularly nice if it were corded with a plain blue-green, like the blue-green of the design.

Restful Colors

The sofa is the biggest piece, so one of the more restful colors in the room—not the one that's the minute you come in the room—is the best choice for it. The same blue-green would be practically perfect.

A sturdy cotton fabric in this color—a strie (pronounced stree-ay) effect with just the faintest little line of yellow marking it into inconspicuous checks is what we've had sketched. You can get a color accent here in the pillows, made of chints like the draperies, with a pleated ruffle of rose-red headed by a cording of yellow.

Plain Chair

Since one big chair is an all-over pattern, our other, we think, should be quite plain. And a plain strie in rose-red would harmonize.

And there you have a room that's as gay and cheerful as anybody could want—and everything is harmony because you had a color scheme.

No matter what colors you decide on, you can work them out on the same principles. If your draperies are plain color instead of chintz, you can repeat their color in one piece of furniture and ensemble it with some patterned material that contains this color

Brighten Up With Slip Covers

AN EFFECTIVE USE OF SLIP COVERS

Proper Form for Her to Ask Him

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. A says that at a supper I intend to have that my young friend should act as host and B says that it isn't necessary. Who is right?

2. Is it correct for a young girl to invite a young man to her home rather than wait for him to ask permission to call? A. M.

1. B is right.

2. Either is correct. She may, with propriety, properly invite him to share the hospitality of her home. On the other hand, it is, of course, correct and gallant to go motoring with the boy, but it was silly to stop speaking to him.

Carrying the Schoolgirl's Books

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I go around with a boy who toes not go to the same school that I attend. He called for me one afternoon and we had a dispute about my books. He thinks that as soon as a girl starts to walk with a boy she should hand him her books. I think she should not. I think he should ask the girl if he may carry her books.

Who is right? PEGGY.

You are right, Peggy. This young gallant may think that a girl should at once hand him her books to carry, but I'm sure that most gallants would consider this a bit "forward."

Appreciation for the Surprise Party

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

If your friends give you a birthday surprise party, what would be the proper thing to say to show your appreciation and thanks? J.

"How very kind you were to plan this lovely party for me. Thank you so much. I have never been so touched in my life; it has been an evening of the most beautiful memories"

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers).

Tiger Heart

By ROBERT T. SHANNON

SHE was beside him and, without realizing, clinging to his arm.

Standing apparently oblivious, feet, Connie and Garson reached the end of the hall where one flight of stairs led upward, and another down. In the offset formed by the landing there was no trace of an intruder.

Connie's voice was hushed—"Someone disappeared right here."

"Sure?"

"I was quite wide awake—"

His fingers clutched around her arm protectingly.

"It looks like something is beginning to stir," he whispered. "There's not a chance in a hundred that you're going to get hurt, dear, but won't you—to please me—go back to your room?"

Her lips defied him, tenderly, adventurously, perversely. She took a delight in showing him that she had no trembling timidity. As a matter of fact, she had not the slightest fear, because her faith in his courage his resourcefulness was without end.

To have him near—to be with him always—

"I'm going to stay—right with you!" she whispered, stubbornly.

Her firm insistence for an instant amused him and there was a quirk of a smile on his lips.

How brave she was! How dear she'd become to him!

"All right, fellow me," he murmured. "Just a minute, now!"

"Whoever it was could have gone either upstairs or downstairs," she informed him, softly.

Garson got a chance in his stance, but stood silent and erect. In the hall light he was a strange, almost bizarre figure in his silk pajamas, his slippers and the long, tailored dressing bathrobe. Despite his tall slenderness, the wide shoulders of Duke Garson bespoke concealed strength. His hair, ruffled from the pillow, gave him an aspect of wildness, new to Connie.

That Door

"That door—what is it?"

In her familiarity with the house, Connie had overlooked the door set in the flat jog of the wall. Her eyes were so used to it that it had produced no impression at all. Besides, there was nothing to pique the imagination, no suggestion of a hiding place. Behind the door was a shallow closet no more than 18 or 20 inches deep and as wide only as the door itself—a recretacle for brooms, dust cloths and fuzzy mops for hardwood

"The mop closet, but it's too small—"

Garson stepped closer to the door until the toe of his foot rested against it—obviously a precaution against any possible outward plunge from whoever, if anyone, might be concealed within.

"Get back!" he whispered to Connie.

"No,—what are you going to do?"

"I'm going to open the door . . ."

An impulse to stay him came to her, but, with an increased beating of her heart, she was stirred suddenly with an excitement, an expectation, that wiped out both fear and caution. Her desire, all at once, was burning and intense; a recklessness, coming over her, illuminated what she had overlooked.

The easiest thing possible for the prowler would have been to slip into the closet, a hiding place close at hand and offering a quicker shelter than flight either up or down stairs. Still, while she had been in Garson's room there had been time for the person to have slipped out and escaped

On the other hand, this was not certain; in the darkness of the closet the hidden intruder would have had no means of knowing but that someone was standing outside silently holding a revolver and waiting. It was like opening a lid of a jack-in-the-box and waiting to see what popped out . . .

Garson's face was set; his left hand clutched the knob, and Connie saw his strong right fist clinch. For a moment his eyes drew her close to him; his lips were within a few inches of her ears

"I've a better plan," he whispered. "You open the door and pull in and shut against yourself as you stand close to the wall."

This, she was quick to see, would provide her with a screen, a barricade.

Connie Thrilled

The thrill of stimulation ran through Connie. This was strategy, action, a quickening interest tingling through all past futility. She nodded.

"Don't get in my way—I'll be able to handle it," he warned her, softly.

Instinctively, he tightened the cord around his waist; the robe was loose enough about the shoulders and his legs to give him ample muscular freedom.

When he was set, tensely, he nodded the signal for her to turn the knob and pull the door.

But cautious self-protection was impossible . . . looked . . .

Inside the closet, pale, narrow, standing straight as an Indian, stood the blazing-eyed form of Mary Smith!

Silence . . .

No one, at first, had the power, the desire to speak. Garson's face was a mask; Connie's eyes were black with incredulity. The skin, the features of Mary Smith were deathly pallid, the lips tightly drawn; but for the blazing eyes she was as harshly expressionless as a dried mummy. Her only movement, as she stepped forward, with her hands hanging at her side, was a slight jerky rise and fall of her chest

Rat Bites Are Dangerous, Play Safe

By DR. COPELAND.

A GREAT advancement in public health would follow the complete extermination of rats. It is important to destroy these pests because they are a menace to health, as well as to property.

Dr. Copeland

Rats could be done away with completely if a systematic and sustained campaign of extermination were undertaken. Too little attention is given these carriers of filth and disease.

"Rat-bite fever" is a disease caused by the bite of these animals. It has been known in China and Japan for several centuries. We frequently see the disease in this country. It is quite common in districts where rats are prevalent and the hygiene is poor.

Ordinarily, the first sign of the disease does not appear until about five weeks after the bite. The wound, which has healed, has in the meantime become red and swollen. The tissues may break down and an ulcer forms. Following this, there is a sudden chill, and then a fever which lasts three or four days

The cause of the disease has been traced to a microscopic organism. The germ is called the "spirochaeta morsus moris." These are terribly big words used to designate an ailment traced to this household pest. The organisms are found in the blood of the rat and transmitted to man by the bite.

The wound caused by a rat bite should be cauterized immediately. Treatment by a physician should not be delayed. In treating this condition specific drugs are used. They are injected in the veins of the patient

If you live near a building infested with rats, immediately report it to the Board of Health. The officials will take the necessary measures for their destruction

QUEEN'S CAKE

½ cup shortening
1½ cups sugar
2 eggs
½ cup sour milk
1 tsp. soda
3½ cups flour
1 cup of raisin juice
1 cup raisins
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. each nutmeg, cloves and cinnamon
4 tsps. baking powder.

Pick over raisins, put in small saucepan, pour over ½ cup water and simmer gently until raisins are puffed. Pour off liquid, should be ½ cup, let cool. Cream shortening and sugar, beat 3 egg yolks and two whites, saving one egg white for frosting, add to first mixture. Sift dry ingredients three times (flour once before measuring) all measurements level. Add alternately with sour milk and raisin juice to shortening, sugar and eggs, beating lightly but well after each addition. Lastly add plumped raisins, mix well. Pour into well-greased and paper-lined loaf, layer or sheet pan as preferred Bake at 325-350 deg. for 35 to 45 minutes. Cool. Frost with

SOUFFLE ICING

Put 1 egg white (unbeaten), 1 cup powdered sugar, and 3 tbsps. cold water into double boiler. Have the water underneath boiling and cook mixture seven minutes, beating constantly. Remove from fire, beating a little longer until right consistency. Add ¾ tsp. vanilla, spread on Queen's Cake and decorate with walnut meats.—Mrs. G. M. Goertz, Box 316, Alton, N. H.

Sauces for Goose and Gander

By MARTHA LEE.

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WLEX

SINCE WE were privileged to offer New England housewives the series of cooking lessons by famous chefs given here in the Martha Lee Cooking School we've come to realize the all-important role the sauces that lend savor to simple dishes play. I was truly disappointed when I found that the Filet Mignon served in a famous hotel was simply a piece of tenderloin fried—yes, actually fried in a little skillet—mounted on a piece of plain cornmeal and-den variety of toast and then blanketed in a mouth-watering mushroom sauce. The French people seem to be gifted with a taste sense that enables them to blend ingredients so as to draw out the most desirable flavors into a sauce that makes good meat perfect and poor meat good.

The new salad book, which I spoke to you about last week and of which I still have some copies for distribution, contains many luscious sauces and sandwich suggestions, as well as recipes for new salads and dressings.

HORSERADISH SAUCE

1½ tbsps. evaporated horseradish
2 tbsps. water
1½ tbsps. cider vinegar
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. paprika
½ cupful whipped cream
Few grains cayenne

Mix the horseradish and water and let stand 10 minutes. Add the vinegar, salt and paprika and let stand 5 minutes longer. Fold in the whipped cream and serve immediately with slices of hot roast beef.

SPANISH SAUCE

2 tbsps. chopped onion

The Old Story

Paying a woman's penalty—time after time

In the year of 1931 there should be no monthly mystyre to pain. Some women still think they must suffer —they haven't heard of Midol—or can't believe that it has solved their problem.

Did you know that five to seven minutes after swallowing a tiny tablet you can be yourself—can be comfortable—can go about without feeling a single further twinge of muscular pain?

Your regular periods need not be painful—they are not painful to those who know of Midol. These wonderful tablets make Nature's process a mere incident. No pain, not even discomfort when you have learned to depend on Midol, as women who used to have the hardest time have found. It is not a narcotic, does not interfere with the process, but does stop the pain; relieves headaches, too; neuralgia, etc. Every drugstore has Midol.

Win Big Men By Sharing Net Profits

Bankers Favor Plan; Two Companies Act; Two Workmen

By B. C. Forbes

New York, March 6—Two important companies yesterday announced profit-sharing plans. Modern business is swiftly moving in that direction. Why? For two main reasons:

B. C. Forbes

First, because of the phenomenal success achieved by different big enterprises under the driving power of executives paid according to results—profit-sharing.

Second because profit-sharing corporations have won unusually keen support from the pick of American business brains. The biggest men want something more than a fixed salary to work for. Profit-sharing gives them the feeling that their efforts count, that they must make good in order to make good money. The sportsmanship of the proposition appeals to them. It injects a certain spirit of adventure.

Kroger Grocery & Baking Company announces that it is setting aside 100,000 common shares for purchase by officials and employees. The most successful chain stores have found that their main problem is manpower, how to train store managers and how to entice them to achieve notable results. The late Frank Woolworth told me that the main secret of his success was his giving each store manager an interest in the profits of his store. He had foresight enough to realize the wisdom of such a principle long before profit-sharing came into vogue. Kroger has 5163 stores.

The Purity Bakeries Corporation has just organized a Management Corporation patterned, apparently, on General Motors' profit-sharing plan. If and when $8 a share is earned on Purity Bakeries stock, 2½ per cent of the net earnings will go to the Management Corporation. If more than $8 a share is earned for stockholders, the Management Corporation will receive $60,000 annually for each additional dollar a share netted for stockholders. The Management Corporation will invest its funds in Purity stock.

I find that our biggest bankers and financiers are turning more and more to offering a profit interest to attract the services they like to take charge of important enterprises.

Incidentally, here is one more method for distributing wealth. No longer do all he profits go to an individual owner or controlling family, but to hitherto-un employes as well as to stockholders.

Talking about the wider distribution of wealth, the author of a book on common stocks writes me:

"I have just received a letter from a working man who, in these times, is buying stock. We are so much obsessed at present with the unemployed (and properly so) that we are forgetting the quite large number of workmen who are enjoying the maximum wage, also the lowering cost of living, and are actually better off than ever. As this man's letter shows, they are even buying stocks, like the wise men they also are."

This workman owns Standard Oil of New Jersey, National Biscuit General Electric and U. S. Steel and U. S. Electric Light & Power. He has saved another thousand dollars and leans towards New York bank shares.

Could you imagine such a citizen considering to flirt with communistic ideas?

"Anyone who knocks high wages and short hours is wrong. Give us plenty of work hours and low cost of living. All this is very easy to do. Anybody who contends to the contrary is not properly informed or else they are deliberately selfish and unfair. Henry Ford says so and he knows high except wages. He is absolutely right. Prices should be still further reduced, about 25 per cent.

"Why don't you take up the cudgels for labor occasionally? Don't you know that labor is being treated terribly shabbily and that no real permanent progress can be made until labor is properly and fairly considered? Men of fifty and sixty are being cut loose from payrolls. Do you consider this fair, just and right? Is this the way to become of them? Give a thought, man, give a thought.

"You don't know anything more about the price of coal. It is still $13.75 cash for a 2000-pound ton in this neighborhood, and you would try to influence some of your coal baron friends to cut the price a little."

That covers a lot of territory. Just one point. I do be astonished did I have even one coal baron friend," for no writer in America has trounced the coal owners more outspokenly that I have during the last many years. I have always regarded the coal industry, by and large, as the worst-managed in America.

Financial and businesswise March has come in like a lamb. There is little indication that it will go out like a lion.

UTILITIES ARE MAKING GOOD 'BULL TIPS'

By FRANK H. MELOON

Probably the most widely circulated "bull tip" this year in Wall St. was the one to the effect that the utilities would develop a strong market after the adjournment of Congress. Numerous new highs in this group have shown how well the tip has made good. As previously pointed out, the heard drew too colorful a picture of what was according to them, assured in the way of adverse legislation. Some of it may come later but that is what Wall St. calls a long way off.

W. C. Durant, in submitting data to stockholders on Durant Motors, Inc., stated:

"I am giving my individual time and attention to the affairs of your company and shall continue to do so.

The words 'my individual time and attention' are but one thing. Certainly they are not the rumors that the former Boston "auto wizard" is sitting with a battery of telephones before him, directing operations in the numerous so-called 'Durant issues' of Wall St.

W. C. Durant

U. S. Department of Commerce report on foreign trade for January showed a decline in total exports to Europe of $75,000,000, as compared with the same month of 1930. Exports to Russia, however, increased in January to $14,799,097, as compared with $12,832,319 last year. Dispatches carrying the announcement failed to state whether much of the decline was due to lower prices. A more enlightening way to render the report would be to give tonnage rather than dollar volume, if comparisons are to be made.

Succeeding two men at once is unusual. H. C. Coney has been elected assistant to the chairman of the Photocolor Corporation. A. G. Waddington was formerly treasurer and N. C. Webb secretary.

Warren A. McCorrison of the Workingmen's Co-operative Bank, Boston, returned from last week's educational conference of American Savings, Building and Loan Institute in Chicago, as the newly-elected district governor for the Eastern States in the Institute. Mr. McCorrison is president of the Boston Chapter of the Institute.

The organization is a national project, affiliated with the United States Building and Loan League, which has as its members the leading building and loan associations and co-operative banks in the country. The purpose of the institute is the training of expert building and loan men into expert home financiers.

Mr. McCorrison was the unanimous choice of the town building and loan men attending the conference for this position.

Business Machines' Gains Worldwide

New York, March 6—"Many of our units in the foreign divisions have registered gains so far this year over the like 1930 period, and our domestic business also has improved," stated Pres. Watson of the Computing Tabulating Machines Corp. prior to his departure for Havana. "We feel the bottom of the depression has been reached and that we are one the way to a gradual recovery. In our business we look forward to another record year in 1931."

Schiff Report Out

Dividends

Meat Johnson & Co. directors have declared extra dividend of 50 cents a share in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share on the common stock.

Wallt & Bond declared a quarterly dividend of 20 cents on class A stock, payable April 15 to stock of record March 18, placing the stock on an 80-cent annual basis, against $1.20 previously.

—Directors of American Rolling Mill Co. omitted dividend on common, currently 40 cents, and declared regular quarterly dividend, of $1.50 on the 6 per cent preferred stock, payable April 15 to stock of record March 31, and the regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 on the Series A 6 per cent preferred stock, payable April 1 to stock of record March 16.

—U. S. Playing Card Co. declared a dividend of 62½ cents payable April 1 to stock of record March 21. Previously the stock was on a $1 quarterly basis.

Chairman Omwake said it was the intention to increase the dividend in subsequent quarters if business justified and that this declaration was not to be considered a regular rate.

Hecla Mining Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 10 cents, placing the stock on a 40-cent annual basis as to $1 previously payable March 12 to stock of record Feb. 15.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Great activity was witnessed among the public utilities. United Corporation has been the outstanding performer, with the entire utility group following its leadership. It was reported that a rather sizable short account had been built up in the utility shares, with one of the street's best-known analyst-bear operators active on the short side of the group.

Insiders sponsored broadcast forecasts of impending large-scale mergers, with the names of half-a-dozen different operating companies mentioned in the connection. In fact, there were many rumors of public utility deals under way than for any one week since 1929 markets.

Some Report on Public Utilities

It was reported that Consolidated Gas was being bought by United Corporation interests; that Columbia Gas was being bought; despite its poor earnings record last year, because it was in figure in a merger. National Power was also named as participant in a merger.

Auburn Slows Up as Sponsors Hit Snag

Auburn Auto for the first time in many weeks, failed to participate in a strong market. For a long time the market had looked to Auburn as a leader. Insiders in the stock indicated that its sponsors had unexpectedly struck a snag and had lost control of the low priced which formerly accorded them complete control of the stock. It was also reported that dissension among its sponsors was due to reports of investigations under way.

Graphophone Well Bought by British

Columbia Graphophone was a strong feature, its activity carrying it among the most active issues. Although it is recognized that the stock is semi-speculative, it is understood that a powerful group of British interests have been large-scale buyers of Graphophone. They have been attracted not only by the possibilities for revival of the long-expected radio deal, but also by reports of the company's strong cash position at the end of last year.

Mullins Contract Doesn't Explain

Mullins Manufacturing, which has been the market sensation of the past week, added to its advance Buying of the issue was related to a contract which the company has secured from International Nickel for the manufacture of various steel products. But a contract expected to add about $2 a share to Mullins earning power doesn't explain such a rise as Mullins has had.

Veterans' Loans Aid Auto Buying

General Motors advances, as did most of the other issues in the group, related to Detroit reports that the soldiers' bonus loans had also stimulated automobile buying throughout the country. Studebaker's 1930 report shows 27 cents a share profit, against $5.53 in 1929.

Treasury's Too High Rate?

Treasury's combined offering of $1,400,000,000 in 3¾ per cent bonds and 1¼ per cent and 2 per cent certificates was more than two and a half times over-subscribed. Total subscription was $3,724,000,000, the $500,000,000 offering of bonds alone bringing subscriptions of $2,111,000,000. A total of $1,499,000,000 was allotted. While cash subscriptions were heavily "padded," big over-subscriptions for 15-year bonds indicated to some observers that possibly an interest rate of ¼ of 1 per cent less might have been justified.

Radio, Telephone Plan Abandoned

Gen. Harbord, chairman of Radio Corp., and Sosthenes Behn, chairman of International Telephone & Telegraph Co., announce that plans for merger of their communications companies have been abandoned after two years' negotiations because of apparent impossibility of obtaining official sanction.

Commercial Alcohol Prospects Encouraging

Officials of American Commercial Alcohol are responsible for the statement that the company thus far this year has shown a fair profit, and that prospects are considered encouraging. That is in sharp contrast with the final three months of last year, when the company operated at a loss.

Barnsdall Corp. Buys Own Stock

Barnsdall is one company which purchased considerable of its stock last year. Part of the stock bought was exchanged for shares of two other companies that were acquired by Barnsdall in a broad and extensive program for expanding its marketing facilities. At the end of last year the company had 64,054 shares in its treasury.

Stewart Warner Well Deflated

Stewart Warner was well deflated during the period of liquidation in recent months. Interests in the company consider the present outlook more favorable than it has been in more than a year. Any further improvement in the automotive industry would mean better results for the company, which is one of the leading producers in the automobile accessory and equipment trade.

Home Products' Successful Year

Some market interests are favoring American Home Products because the company had the most successful year in its history in 1930, and business thus far in the current year has been running ahead of that of the corresponding period a year ago. At current levels, the issue returns a yield of about 7 per cent which is considered attractive by interests who often have been identified with the shares. Some make the point that if earnings hold up this year, as sizable short account had been built up in the utility shares, with one of the street's best-known analyst-bear operators active on the short side of the group.

Insiders sponsored broadcast forecasts of impending large-scale mergers, with the names of half-a-dozen different operating companies mentioned in the connection. In fact, there were many rumors of public utility deals under way than for any one week since 1929 markets.

Some Report on Public Utilities

It was reported that Consolidated Gas was being bought by United Corporation interests; that Columbia Gas was being bought, despite its poor earnings record last year, because it was in figure in a merger. National Power was also named as participant in a merger.

Auburn Slows Up as Sponsors Hit Snag

Auburn Auto for the first time in many weeks, failed to participate in a strong market. For a long time the market had looked to Auburn as a leader. Insiders in the stock indicated that its sponsors had unexpectedly struck a snag and had lost control of the low priced which formerly accorded them complete control of the stock. It was also reported that dissension among its sponsors was due to reports of investigations under way.

Graphophone Well Bought by British

Columbia Graphophone was a strong feature, its activity carrying it among the most active issues. Although it is recognized that the stock is semi-speculative, it is understood that a powerful group of British interests have been large-scale buyers of Graphophone. They have been attracted not only by the possibilities for revival of the long-expected radio deal, but also by reports of the company's strong cash position at the end of last year.

Mullins Contract Doesn't Explain

Mullins Manufacturing, which has been the market sensation of the past week, added to its advance Buying of the issue was related to a contract which the company has secured from International Nickel for the manufacture of various steel products. But a contract expected to add about $2 a share to Mullins earning power doesn't explain such a rise as Mullins has had.

Veterans' Loans Aid Auto Buying

General Motors advances, as did most of the other issues in the group, related to Detroit reports that the soldiers' bonus loans had also stimulated automobile buying throughout the country. Studebaker's 1930 report shows 27 cents a share profit, against $5.53 in 1929.

CURB MARKET IS LED UPWARD BY UTILITIES

New York, March 6—A fresh boom in utility stocks in curb dealings today helped up speculative enthusiasm for the rise in other sections of the market, with generally higher price levels being reached all along the line.

Demand for the utility leaders reached large scale proportions as reports of impending mergers were floated around. Electric Bond & Share, quoted ex-dividend, opened on a block of 18,000 shares at 89¾, a net gain of 2½ points over its previous close, holding around this level for the greater part of the forenoon.

Cities Service was up but slightly, showing a gain of ¼ point at its midday high of 18¾.

Investment trusts firmed up, but not to any important extent, with fractional advances predominating in the list of active issues.

The oil group continued to feel the effects of further price cutting in crude oil, and declines to lower levels were the rule in the leading petroleum shares.

Mead Johnson was again the highlight in the specialty group, moving up in record trading to a high at 108. Other strong spots were Driver Harris, up 1½, at 33, and Deere, up 1¾, at 41¾.

Railroads Curtail

Railroads are cutting down expenses wherever possible in an effort to bolster up their net operating income, Spectator observes. This is seen in the orders for railroad equipment since the beginning of the year, with orders for domestic builders received orders for only 24 freight cars, against none in the first two months of January and 16 in February, 1930). No passenger cars were ordered in the first two months of 1931, while 134 were ordered in February, 1930. Ten locomotives were ordered in the first two months against 179 up to the end of February last year.

New Voters Added to Newbury Lists

Newbury, March 6—The first registration of voters in the town of Newbury was held last evening and in the three meetings of the board of registrars there have been a gain of 14 in Precinct 1 (Old-town) and 16 in Precinct 2 (Byfield).

Eighteen names have been stricken from the lists because of death and removals from town and the net gain for the year is 12. The voting list now has two precincts now is: Precinct 1, 491; Precinct 2, 281, making a total of 872 voters.

Building Condemned After Recent Blaze

Newburyport, March 6—The building owned by Nicholas Pahkis on Merrimac st., recently ruined by fire, has been condemned by Building Commissioner Peter Gegnon. The inspector found that immediately after the insurance is settled the building will either be razed or rebuilt.

INSURANCE

32,500 Killed by Autos in Year 1930 Automobile Mileage Decreases 10 Per Cent. Benefits Derived From Special Policies Drivers and Pedestrians Protected

By Frank F. Loomis

Thirty-two thousand, five hundred persons killed, 963,325 injured in 826,250 automobile accidents in the United States in 1930!

With an indicated decrease in the motor vehicle mileage in the last quarter of the year of at least 15 billion miles, or around 10 per cent, the number of automobile accidents increased around 12 per cent, despite more than 4 per cent and the injured toll, 13 per cent.

Because of the greater number of deaths and injuries and increased damage to property, fully $300,000,000 in claims was paid by the insurance companies writing automobile casualty, life and accident insurance.

These statistics and facts on 1930's loss of life and injuries in automobile accidents was compiled by the Travelers Insurance Company, which has just issued a 80-page pamphlet, built up from state reports, compiling figure and charts, in addition to much valuable explanatory matter on the subject of motor vehicle accidents.

If you were one of the million or more persons in motor vehicle accidents every year in the United States, you would realize the benefits derived from special automobile accident policies, now being issued by many insurance companies.

Payments for loss of life.....	$8000
Both eyes, both hands, both feet	$5000
Hand and foot	$5000
Hand and foot and eye	$5000
Arm or leg	$3000
Hand or foot	$3000
Sight of one eye	$1300
Thumb or index finger	$900

Pays if you are injured: While operating, driving, demonstrating, adjusting, cranking, or repairing a private passenger automobile; while riding in a public or private automobile; in consequence of the explosion or burning of an automobile; by being struck or run down by an automobile.

The amounts paid for loss of time and medical expense as result of injuries in accidents as described above are as follows:

Total disability, $25 per week, not exceeding 26 weeks; partial disability, $12.50 per week, not exceeding four weeks; hospital and graduate nurse benefits, $10 per week, not exceeding four weeks; non-disabling injuries, $10 for surgeon's fees; identification indemnity, $100.

Such a policy, as outlined above, is applicable to men and women, and gives protection not only to drivers of automobiles, but to pedestrians as well. Pedestrians figured largely among the deaths and injured as result of automobile accidents last year. 14,300 pedestrians were killed.

With an increase in motor vehicle accidents yearly, no one can afford to be without accident insurance protection. It might happen to you any day, as it has happened to a million others.

Check up on your insurance coverage and make sure you are fully protected. If not, insure now before it is too late, and protect your loss of business time with accident insurance.

Savings Deposits Show a Large Gain

Philadelphia, March 6—Deposits of mutual savings banks here increased $3,562,060 in February, the largest increase for the month in the history of the savings banks. The gain compares with $2,500,172 in February, 1930, and $1,331,698 in February, 1929, and gains of $1,982,822 in February, 1928, and $1,124,772 in February, 1927.

New York, March 6—Prices were mixed in today's Wall Street dealings, as the session progressed after a buoyant opening.

UTILITIES PEP UP

Point or better gains appeared in Otis, Holman, Pacific Lighting, and Gas, United Aircraft, Vanadium, Warren Bros., Allied Chemical, Best & Co., Corn Products, Chicago Pneumatic, Electric Power & Light, du Pont, Pere Marquette, Rohm & Hershey, Johns-Manville, Liggett & Myers 'B and International Harvester.

Mullins was down over a point, Auburn sold up 2, then soon fell back 5 from the top.

Such issues as U. S. Steel, General Electric, Bethlehem Steel and American Can showed fractional losses by the end of the first half hour, while Westinghouse and Case were off 2 points. Unions were up again turned over in huge volume, but failed to make headway.

With this news all the end of the week showing little change, bears were inclined to regard yesterday's rally as merely a technical rebound after a five-day sag and were quick to renew their efforts.

Speculators for the five however, felt that the rally should carry further. This confusion of opinion made the market dull for traders rather cautious.

DIVIDEND PAYMENTS

February cash dividend payments made by domestic corporations totaled $237,903,642, Standard Statistics Co. reports. Rails led the list of major divisions with a total of $53,025,677, while electric light and gas companies were next with $46,550,311.

More than half of the 53,000 of 2170 in bonds which are to be issued by Hershey Co. in connection with its acquisition of Majestic Household Utilities Corp. have been subscribed for subject to the pre-emptive right of stockholders to subscribe on a proportionate basis pro rata to their stock holdings.

Meetings of stockholders of both companies to vote on the merger and financing have been called for March 10.

Voting of more than $54,000 000 by the city of Chicago and Cook County for sewers and street and park improvements is expected to augmented the total volume of engineering construction operations announced throughout the country during the week, Construction Daily reports.

The total, however, for all classes of planned work, except highways, fell to $90,136,000, as compared with $96,210,000 in the preceding week, but showed a substantial gain over the $71,782,000 for the corresponding week last year.

KRESGE SALES UP 1.5 P. C.

New York, March 6—S. S. Kresge Co. sales for January and February this year showed an increase of 1.5 per cent to $19,594,828 from a total of $19,290,421 for the corresponding months of 1930.

The total for February was $9,796,853, compared with $9,624,853 for January. It registered a decline of 1.7 per cent from a total of $9,943,- 68 reported for February last year.

February sales of the G. C. Murphy Co. increased 21.7 per cent to $1,048,158, compared with $861,- 927 for the like month of 1930. Sales for the first two months this year aggregated $2,020,302, an increase of 25.7 per cent over $1,- 928 316 reported for the corresponding period of last year.

Melville Shoe Co. reported February sales of $1,519,960, a decrease of 9.17 per cent from $1,673,824 for February last year. Sales for January and February this year totaled $3,175,834, an increase of 2.66 per cent over $3,158 890 reported for the like months of 1930

Maytag's 1930 Net Equals 43c. Share

Maytag Company reports for 1930 net profits of $2,030,302, equivalent, after dividends of $1,329,761 on first preferred and cumulative preference stocks, to 43 cents a share on 1,617,922½ shares of common stock outstanding at the end of the year

Net profits for 1929 were $6,834,- 884, equivalent, after preferred and preference dividends, to $3.33 a share.

Studebaker Earns 27 Cents a Share

Studebaker Corporation for 1930 shows net profits of $1,550,180 after all charges, but before deduction of preferred dividends and dividends on Pierce Arrow preferred. After these allowances, net income was equal to 27 cents a share on common. This compares with net profits of $6.58 a share during 1929

Cotton Men Want 2 Extra Holidays

STATE STREET SIDELIGHTS

State Street is under the impression that the market will enjoy a technical rally of fair proportions in almost a week of steadily declining values. Also that when a large increase in the size of the short account, which is expected to furnish a strong basis for good operations.

There is no reason to expect this turnabout to be anything but temporary, as there is nothing to indicate that the selling of the past few days has exhausted itself and a sustained upturn in the making. Rather it will prevent an opportunity to lighten accounts that are a bit topheavy.

The financial district has heard some unique explanations of recent moves, yet the story on Mullins Body was most interesting. The company is said to have entered into agreement with International Match whereby the match kings sinks of a special metal produced by the big mining concern

Auburn Motor was able to travel from under a hundred without any propelling force. Other than the knowledge of a large short interest. Now, with the news priced in the move, the public is suddenly let in on the news of an impending merger with Cord on a 17 Cord for one Auburn basis

This flood of information as to why certain stocks have had such wide moves and should go higher may be all right, but many brokers consider it looks too much like an invitation to the public to get in at the top and they are advising their customers not to follow it or the rally they are looking for.

World War Mines Menacing Vessels

Washington, March 6—Vessels navigating waters along the northeast coast of Scotland are warned to be on the lookout for unexploded mines remaining from the World War which may still be dangerous, states the Dundee Courier and Advertiser, according to information from Consul John Dyer Hall, Dundee, Scotland, made public today by the Department of Commerce.

Magma Copper Is at $2 Annual Rate

New York, March 6—Magma Copper Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents, placing the stock on a $2 annual basis, against $8 previously. Dividend is payable April 15 to stock of record March 31.

2 Months' Sales of Woolworth Higher

Sales for the first two months of the current year of F. W. Woolworth Co. totaled $38,627,920, an increase of five-tenths of one per cent over the total of $38,435,587 reported for the corresponding period of last year.

ADVICE TO INVESTORS FREE

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Grimal, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

CANNOT ADVISE

M. D., Boston—Does Sears, Roebuck look like a good purchase? If the much predicted improvement in business conditions occurs this year, the stock should work higher Ans.—You are on a hunt for profits. We can be of no assistance. You know as much about future market prices as the smart daring pool operator. Against dividends of $2.50 a share, Sears, Roebuck earned $3.01 a share in 1930. In 1929 earnings were $6.62 a share, and in 1928, $4.26. The company, a leading mail order house, has paid dividends from 1924; current rate from May, 1926. The custom of paying 1 per cent extra each quarter during the past two years will be discontinued May 1. The yield now is 4 per cent.

ANOTHER DEFICIT

D. J., Needham—When American Locomotive paid dividends of $8 I bought some for investment. The rate has been lowered twice and I am still holding it at a loss. What do you think of it?

Ans.—American Locomotive common is a speculation. For the income for year ended December 31, 1930, amounted to $1.61 a share, after dividend requirements on the 7 per cent preferred stock. After the payment of $1,750,000 in dividends on the preferred stock, the deficit for the year amounted to $2,381,442. In 1929 earnings were $5.40 a share, but after the payment of $6,100,000 in common dividends, the deficit was $3,003,700. From 1925 the annual rate was $8 a share. June 30, 1930, the stock was put on a $4 share annual basis. September 30, 1930, it was reduced to the present $2 rate. No one can know future prices

RATE REDUCED

J. C., Watertown—What do you think of Reo Motor? Shall I sell some of the stock bought higher?

Ans.—Better use your own judgment We do not know where Reo Motor will sell. The stock is speculative With quarterly payment of 10 cents a share April 1, the stock will be on an annual basis of 40 cents, against 80 cents a share paid from third quarter of 1925. The company is one of the smaller motor car manufacturers in the country. Expenses of developing new models during 1930 resulted in a deficit of $1,300,000 for nine months ended September 30, 1930. In full year 1929 earnings were 71 cents a share, against $2.84 in 1928. Rates of 70 cents were paid in 1926; 20 cents in 1927, and 70 cents and 60 cents, respectively, in 1928 and 1929.

INCOME ASSURED

C. C., Westwood—What are the latest earnings of Reat? I have a small profit on a few shares and wonder if I could get more later on.

Ans.—We could not tell you future prices for securities. All we can say is that Reat & Company reports earnings sufficient to cover the current $2 dividend on the common stock. For year ended January 30, 1931, net income amounted to $4.15 a share, after charges and preferred dividends accrued were $1.47 a share for year ended January 30, 1930. The company conducts a wearing apparel business originally established in 1870. The present company has paid dividends on the preferred and common issues since 1924.

BE EXPLICIT

F. S., Boston—Foster-Wheeler has been suggested as a good stock to buy now. How about earnings?

Ans.—Unofficial estimate of Foster-Wheeler's net income for 1930 approximates $6 a share. In 1929 earnings were $6.35 a share, compared with $3.12 in 1928. An initial quarterly dividend of 37½ cents a share was paid October 1, 1927; nothing further until final quarter of 1929, when the stock was put on the present $2 a share annual basis. It would appear that the dividend is being earned, but not

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Senor Canzoneri's Vendetta With Signor Furrulla.

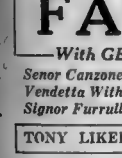
TONY LIKELY TO OUTSMART SAMMY

ALONG CAULIFLOWER ALLEY the general opinion is that Tony Canzoneri, world's lightweight champion, will outsmart Sammy Fuller in their joust in the Boston Garden, tonight. Tony is a worthy champion, fast as a streak, heady for a youngster and a sharp hitter with both hands. We were fortunate in seeing him in most of his early fights. Saw him alice his way up through the bantams and feathers into the lightweight division and knock Al Singer colder than a landlady's heart for the championship of the universe.



TONY CANZONERI

The only man who gave Canzoneri much trouble was Jackie Kid Berg. Fuller is a tough, rugged slugger, a little bit on the Berg order. Sammy lacks the Whitechapel Jew's bulldog aggressiveness and rawhide endurance, but if he can carry it fast enough he may cause us big a surprise as when Canzoneri knocked out Singer, or when Leo Larrivee rocked Vittorio Livan to sleep more recently, in the Arena. Upsets are getting to be the rule in the ring nowadays. Even Jack Dempsey once forgot to duck.

CANZONERI only has just reached his 22d birthday, but in the record books his age is given as 25. A little thing like fibbing to the State Commission is nothing in a boxer's gay young life.

The last time Tony showed in Boston it was as a simon-pure. And —whisper it—Tony was licked. In his vendetta with Signor Ferrulla, tonight, Senor Canzoneri wants to look out for the voodoo!

SAMMY FULLER'S right name is Sabino Ferrulla. You can't tell a boxer by his name. Philadelphia once had a great little bantam, a Jewish boy who fought under the name of Eddie O'Keefe. Eddie had the biggest nose in the world. It was so big it almost hid his face. One night, hurrying from a fight club in which O'Keefe boxed the star bout a big Irishman grabbed us and demanded excitedly who had won.

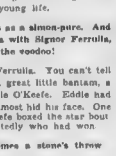
"O'Keefe," we replied.

"Glory be!" exclaimed the Celt. "He comes a stone's throw from me old home in Tipperary."

MAJORITY RULES—except as regards prohibition. There is only one pitcher on a baseball nine. There are eight other players. That is why since the early days of the game the pitcher always has been the goat of legislation.

First they gave the batter the privilege of calling for either a high or low ball. After baseball became organized the pitching slab was moved from 45 feet to 60 feet 6 inches from home plate. Freak deliveries were barred. The ball from time to time was made more resilient. First, a rubber core was placed inside the leather, then a cork inside the rubber. Changes in yarn, winding and cover were made, all designed to aid the batter.

Now the reaction has set in. The moguls decided the dear old game was suffering with homerunitis and overthefenceicalis or some other highfalutin ailment. They would have us believe they have come to the aid of the poor, long suffering, downtrodden pitchers with a new ball that will reduce home runs to the minimum and make corpulent batting averages become skinny.



DICK RUDOLPH

The boys seem to be knocking the ball over the fence in the same old way down in the Southern training camps, however. But the pitchers haven't started stepping on it yet or hooking 'em over, so it is too soon to pass judgment on the new apple.

As far as we can see the only difference between the old ball and the new is the raised stitches. The raised stitches will not affect either speed or control, but it will make for weirder, sharper breaking curves.

A SMART pitcher like Dick Rudolph would make the new ball do some tall tricks. If Dave Danforth were in the game, he would be in his glory. Dave used to dig those thick thumbnails of his into the stitches and make the old ball say uncle, aunty, and all the relations for generations back. American League umpires couldn't find out just what Dave did to the ball. Oh, how they exulted when Dave passed out of the majors!

"Doc" Lafitte, Allan Southron and Tom Seaton all were great ball manipulators. Barring of the freak deliveries shackled that special brand of smart pitchers. Fans are wondering if the new raised stitches will bring them back? Perhaps and perhaps not. Wait until the season gets under way a few weeks and we shall see what we shall see.

CHARLES F. ADAMS, president of the Bruins, vice-president and part owner of the Braves, is getting to be a lot like Alexander. He eternally is seeking other world's to conquer. Now the hockey and baseball magnates has invaded the turf and has half a dozen two-year-olds and a string of hunters training at Belmont Park. Harry King tells us they are a likely looking lot of youngsters and are well advanced in their training. He thinks the Adams silks will be prominent on the turf this coming season.

C. F. ADAMS

Adams only is following another former Braves owner, James E. Gaffney, into racing. Gaffney's silks were on the American turf for a quarter of a century. Frank Farrell of the Yankees went from the turf into baseball. So did Charles Stoneham of the Giants. Frank Navin, owner of the Tigers, campaigned a string of thoroughbreds on the Western circuit.

What was football's loss was the track's gain as far as Bernie McCafferty, the crack Holy Cross middle distancer, is concerned. Playing for the Seton Hall Prep against the McBurney school one day, Bernie got rattled and tackled his own team's ball toter. Bernie says he was so ashamed he was afraid to don a football suit again and took to running.

"My time for two miles is 8 minutes flat. I made it once in a little less than nine. My time for three miles is less than 15 minutes." Just when Dan started to page Mr. Nurmi he read the postscript

"P. S.—Two miles made in nine minutes was in street running, also the three miles. When I made it in less than nine I ran on country roads."

There's a big, strapping, 6 feet 3 inches, 245 pound sandpean from County Offaly, Ireland, who may horn his way into the fistic pudding sooner or later. His name is Pat Redmond and he has won all his five fights in New York, three with knockouts. Pa Fitzherty, the famous sporting man, has $10,000 to wager that Pat can knock Primo Carnera for a row of tinmiledown shacks in Athlone.

'Bring 'Em Back Alive' Author Tells of Visit to Nepal

It requires almost the same tact and diplomacy to obtain permission from the Maharajah of Nepal to hunt the vanishing Indian rhinoceros as it would to settle some grave international dispute. The tiny principality of Nepal nestles under the frowning peaks of the Himalayas and tells even Great Britain to mind its own business. The Indian rhino is royal game in Nepal; the maharajah rarely gives consent for a foreigner to hunt there.

In his fascinating tale of adventure, "Bring 'Em Back Alive," Frank Buck tells in this instalment of his preliminary negotiations for permission to scour the jungle for single-horned Indian rhinos.

CHAPTER VII

I was in the office of Dr. William T. Hornaday, then director of the New York Zoological Park. This was back in 1922.

After discussing some lesser assignments, Dr. Hornaday reopened a subject that had been close to his heart for some time. "Isn't there some way we can secure an Indian rhinoceros?" he asked. "You know I've always wanted one."

I appreciated the confidence that this eminent zoologist displayed in me in discussing the possibility of securing one of these rare animals, the great single-horned, armor-plated rhinoceros of India which is now practically extinct in that country.

Dr. Hornaday, with the zeal of the honest-to-goodness zoologist, who will not take no for an answer, pressed his point. I did not feel very optimistic about the prospects, but I found myself weakening. Dr. Hornaday's faith in me made me feel that I ought to secure for him the prize he sought.

The Indian rhinos, as far as India itself is concerned, is virtually a non-existent animal. In former years it ranged all over northern India away up into the United Provinces and as far south as southern Bengal, and it was, in those palmy days, the greatest of all big game known to man. It is the largest, the most awe-inspiring of all rhinos, an Indian bull rhinoceros being much greater in size than the common African variety.

ROYAL GAME

In the little State of Nepal, which in size is the Asiatic equivalent of a country like Montenegro in Europe, the Indian rhino has always been regarded as royal game, no one except the Maharajah and those friends and associates to whom he gave special permission being allowed to hunt it. For this reason the species has survived in Nepal and quite a number of them are to be found in the southeastern part of the country, which comprises the foothills of the Himalayas.

The more I thought of the project the more it fascinated me—and the more I was stumped by the problem of Nepal's ironclad governmental regulations which not only forbade strangers to hunt the Indian rhino, but actually did not permit foreigners to enter the country! These were the difficulties that had floored me in the past on those occasions when my ambitions as a collector had betrayed me into visualizing myse.f as the proud possessor of one of these rare animals that very few hunters, including the greatest, have ever seen, much less shot or captured.

It was a diplomatic mission as well as a collecting trip. It involved getting in right with someone close to the ruler of this powerful little kingdom that breaks no interference in its affairs and lets the whole world go hang as it goes about its business, demanding nothing of other countries except that they do the same thing.

WHITE MEN BARRED

Even England, with the tremendous power she exercises in Asiatic affairs, has only the faintest kind of look-in in Nepal. By a special arrangement whose negotiations taxed the diplomatic talents of the Foreign Office —(for the Nepalese are a stubborn people to deal with)—a lone British attache hangs his hat, and does little else, in Khatmandu, the capital. His role is that of "adviser" to the Maharajah, having utterly no connection with or control over any of Nepal's official business or its law-making. This unofficial representative contents himself with keeping a watchful eye on the Russian Bear and the challenge to the wisdom of letting the Nepalese severely alone.

The only other white man permitted in Nepal is an electrical engineer who supervises the Maharajah's power house in Khatmandu. Sometimes His Highness craves for his primitive country some of the benefits of modern civilization, like electrically lighted streets, which are to be found in the capital. But as soon as the white man who crossed the

Fight Fans Must Wear Full Dress

With the utmost dignity and decorum, Harvard and M. I. T. boxing teams will clash in the new indoor athletic building tonight.

The general public is not admitted. Only bona fide students of the two Cambridge institutions will be allowed in the building.

According to intercollegiate boxing rules, which govern tonight's glove fiesta, a funeral silence will be very much in order as the collegs battlers wallop away. The fighters go for three two-minute rounds, unless stopped by an unavoidable right hook on the chin.

WRESTLING RESULTS

At Washington—Jim Londos, Greece, title claimant, defeated Billy Jones, Nebraska.

ROOKIE TO HURL FOR BRAVES

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 6—Regis Le Heny, rookie southpaw mound ace, who hails from Pittsburgh and who is the best of the recruit pitchers at the Braves' training camp here, will start on the gimb for the Tribe against the New York Yankees in the first exhibition game of the season at Waterfront Park, tomorrow.

Bill McKechnie, Braves' manager, had his eye on the Smoky City boy for the past few days in the scrub games, an' has decided to use him for a few innings to see what he is made of.

Le Heny has plenty of stuff, and is big and strong, and if he makes a good showing against the Gotham team he may be given a place on the Braves' pitching staff. Fred Frankhouse, veteran hurler, will relieve the young recruit after five or six innings. Al Bool, the big socker, will do the receiving.

Jose Santa Is K. O'd in 2nd Round

Eddie Holmes of Providence, 120 pounds, and Gaston Lecarie of France, 119 pounds, fought eight slashing rounds to a draw. Henry Scott of Atlantic City, 135½, won the decision over Bristol Brown of Bristol, 131, in six rounds. Manny Souza of Fall River knocked out Larry McManus of Artic, R. I., in the third round.

B. C. BATTERY MEN REPORT

This number, which includes nine pitchers and five catchers, is smaller than usual, but all are veterans, either from the varsity or freshmen squads of last season. More candidates are expected to report today or the first part of next week.

Capt. George Colbert headed the list of catchers who reported. Fred Meier and Henry Nicholson, both members of the varsity squad last season, were also present.

Earl McIntire and Owen Mullaney, who divided the catching assignment for the freshmen last year, were the only sophomores present. Both are good candidates and will probably see action during the year to obtain some experience.

Johnny Dixon, who brought the only victory over Holy Cross to the Eagles last year, and Pete Herman, captain of last year's team, were the outstanding pitchers who reported for practice.

REFE

CHEERS OF MOB ALL FOR MALONEY

Miami, Fla., March 6 (INS)—The opinion of shrewd observers today was that Referee Elmer McClelland of Detroit knew something when he raised the hand of Primo Carnera and then speedily ducked after the Italian giant's 10-round scuffle here last night with Jimmy Maloney of Boston.

In the "Battle of the Bent Rib' there were no cheers among the crowd of more than 15,000 fans at Madison Square Garden Stadium for the Italian's victory, but the cheers for the Boston boy rose in a crescendo when some admirer sent a sheaf of roses through the ropes to the loser.

Opinion on the fight was divided somewhat among the critics but a bulk of the experts disagreed with the referee.

The International News Service score gave five rounds to Maloney, three to Carnera and two even.

In only one round did the big man from Italy have Maloney in any trouble of consequence and that was in the ninth. A left to the chin sent the Bostonian to the ropes.

Carnera outscored Maloney decidedly in the ninth round but with the exception of that inanna Maloney was entirely the aggressor and general outpunched Carnera two to one.

The Italian monster appeared in the right, with his right side, where he recently broke or at least cracked a rib, heavily taped. However, throughout the fight he showed none of the ill effects of which his manager, Leon See, sang in long but not so low key a minor lament for three weeks.

Some of the critics who thought Maloney should have been given the decision pointed out today that Carnera will undoubtedly be a bigger box office attraction against the winner of the Schmeling-Stribling fight in June but they insisted Maloney made the better fight.

No official figures on the gate were given out. It was estimated the crowd may have reached 20,000 and in that even Manager Frank Bruen would sustain a relatively small loss.

In the preliminaries a one-punch knockout win for Jimmy Braddock, Jersey City lightheavyweight, over Jack Roper, California heavyweight, featured. An eight-round decision was given to Maxie Rosenbloom, world's lightheavy champ, over Marty Gallagher, Washington (D. C.) heavyweight. Rosenbloom weighed 182, Gallagher's weight was 202.

Davis Cup Chances of U.S. Poor, Says Tilden

Hollywood, Cal., March 6 (INS)—William Tilden, 2d, who has won 30 tennis titles as an amateur, invaded the Pacific coast today as a professional and unburdened his mind of some observations about the racquet racket.

Tilden said America's chances of shining in Davis Cup competition were lacking in candlepower until a cup-caliber team can be developed.

"We had the makings of a winning Davis Cup team last year. But when John Doeg and Wilmer Allison quit the team was thrown in the back lot. Van Ryn and Lott, the new doubles team, have not made any too brilliant a start and it looks as though America would have to start all over again," Tilden said.

4 Teams Deadlocked for Lead in Race

New York, March 6 (AP)—Franco Georgetti of Italy and his new partner, Norman Hill of San Jose, Cal., along with three other teams led the way into the fifth day of the international six-day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden today. The three other teams are Debaets-Winter, McNamara-Beckman and Le Walldeur and B. Waltham. At 7 a. m. the leaders had gone 1940 miles 9 laps.

RIB-CRACKER WINNER IN "PRELIMS"

Miami, Fla., March 6—Walter Cobb, 221-pound Baltimore giant, credited with delivering the blow that cracked Primo Carnera's rib during a workout, clubbed out a decision over Ralp Fiscarello, young Brooklyn heavyweight, in the first six-round preliminary to the Carnera-Jimmy Maloney fight here. Cobb lumbered around the ring, chasing his 189-pound rival, and forcing the fight, but no knockdowns or heavy damage eventuated.

Jack Dorval of Emporium, Pa., 214, won the decision over the Egyptian "Prince" Saish El-Din, 206, in another six-rounder.

FIRST ROUND

Carnera walked out in very lively fashion and began feinting at Maloney, who backed away. Carnera was first to lead but was short. The referee warned him for not stepping back at command. He also warned Carnera for sneaking his punches. Maloney tried to hook Carnera over that bad rib.

Carnera, still showing remarkable agility, hagged his left hard to Maloney's nose, and crossed his right. He blocked well, but he missed a couple of terrific smashes at Maloney's chin. Maloney played for Carnera's head with his short arms, Cobb lumbered around the ring, chasing his 189-pound rival, and forcing the fight, but no knockdowns or heavy damage eventuated.

Jack Dorval of Emporium, Pa., 214, won the decision over the Egyptian "Prince" Saish El-Din, 206, in another six-rounder.

SECOND ROUND

Maloney hit Carnera a terrific punch on the ear with a looping right hand swing. He smashed Carnera over the plastered section, and nailed him with a right to the chin that made Carnera grab. But Primo kept smashing away, and finally smacked Maloney a punch that made James' eyes blink. McClelland, the referee, swung in a circle as he tried to pull the hugs men apart.

THIRD ROUND

Carnera fairly thundered out of his corner for the third. Maloney stepped aside and let him tear past, then trotted away from the big fellow. Carnera got him against the ropes and whacked Maloney on the head.

Maloney covered his face with both hands and Carnera pounded at his shield. Maloney stabbed Carnera's face twice with his left and nailed him on the chin with a right cross. They traded punches to the face.

FOURTH ROUND

Nardiello came into the ring as the round ended and questioned the giant. Primo seemed to be all right. He charged out for the fourth, moving like a lightweight, and Maloney skipped away. Carnera slipped and fell to his hands and knees and grinned widely as he got up. Maloney kept plugging his left to that plaster. It didn't seem to bother Primo.

Maloney hooked his left to Primo's cheek hard but high. Carnera stabbed Maloney in the face with a long left. He knocked down Maloney's hook to the body, drove Maloney into the Carnera corner and belted him with both hands around the head. It was a great fight this far. Maloney backed into a neutral corner and Carnera missed four cracks at his chin.

FIFTH ROUND

Dr. Nardiello was again in the ring to briefly inspect Carnera as the fourth ended. Carnera was now puffing somewhat. He trotted out at the bell, however, and began the attack. He adjusted his tights as Maloney bit him a bit low.

SIXTH ROUND

SEVENTH ROUND

EIGHTH ROUND

Carnera came out hippity-hopping for the eighth, apparently fresh. Maloney at once resumed stabbing at Primo's nose with a left hand. Maloney had to drive upward to reach Primo's height.

Maloney hit Carnera so hard that he recoiled off the huge Venetian into the ropes. A thousand voices shouted advice to James from the ringside, most of them "Keep moving," and "Keep out of the corners." James did his best to heed everybody.

Carnera bent him over the ropes and pummeled him hard, but Jimmy kept his head rolling and avoided most of the punches. Maloney dug a mighty blow into Carnera's cracked rib, but the giant didn't falter. Carnera caught him alongside the head with a left-hand smack that must have made James see stars. He returned to his corner walking wearily.

NINTH ROUND

Maloney was scarcely off his stool for the ninth when Carnera was upon him. Maloney had to bob industriously to get out of danger. Carnera stabbed him twice with his left as Maloney bobbed. Carnera cuffed Maloney around the chops with an open glove. Carnera drove Maloney into Jimmy's own corner and belted him solidly around the head.

TENTH ROUND

Dr. Nardiello questioned Carnera during the rest before the final round, and Primo shook his huge head. Bee, Duffy and Ray Arcel worked over him industriously. The men shook hands across McLelland's extended arm as they came together for the final round. Maloney shoved in pounding at Carnera's body.

He banged right and left into Primo's torso, then turned his back to Primo and walked away while Primo fumbled in space for a small opponent. Maloney charged wheling his hands to Primo's body again. Carnera swung his huge arc-like blows at Maloney with both hands but he couldn't seem to connect. Maloney took a desperate chance and blazed away with both hands at Primo's chin.

He had Primo on the defensive. Maloney backed Primo up and swung his right to Primo's head. As the bell sounded, McLelland grabbed Carnera's gloved hand and swung it high in the air.

DOUBLE HOCKEY BILL TONIGHT AT ARENA

The second and final game of the series between the Boston Hockey Club and the Kentville, N. S., Wildcats will be played at the Arena in the top half of a double-header which brings together in the other series University Club and Boston University, finalists on the New England amateur tournament.

University Club and Boston University gained the final of the New England championship when the Terriers defeated Brown Bears in the semifinal and the clubmen knocked off Concord, N. H.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

"Dear Mr. Horton"—so one of a number of recent letters greets me—"I have just read in one of the golf magazines how a verticle axis swing promotes rhythm. It must be flattering to you to have your articles so widely used." Indeed it is. It's something anyhow. Maybe it's flattering. In 350 newspapers in the United States, Canada, England, Scotland, South Africa, South America and Australia, I give an original golf thought circulation among million of golfers. Then a magazine adds a thousand more to the list. This rubs a drop of flattery on me which lasts a long time indeed. It's all for the good of golf, however, except the theory that the verticle axis principle aids rhythm, it doesn't—exactly the opposite would be the fact. The verticle axis method is a mechanical principle in golf entirely. Rhythm is the basic fundamental. The former you can use or not, as you please; the latter is indispensable. The magazine reader may like to know.

Sonnenberg Is Victor Over Wykoff

By JACK CONWAY

Gus Sonnenberg, looking in better physical condition than he has been in for over a year, smashed his way to a decisive victory over Lee Wykoff at the Arena under the direction of Paul Bowser.

Sonnenberg won in two straight falls. He scored the first fall in 2 minutes and the second in 11 minutes. On each occasion a flying tackle sent Wykoff crashing to the canvas.

Sonnenberg was greeted by a crowd of 9000 fans upon his return to the mat. He was cheered wildly when he scored each fall. The old Examiner is still the darling of the mob. Sonnenberg set a furious pace from the start of the match. After five minutes of wrestling, he opened fire with a flying tackle, but missed. Wykoff tried to keep across quarters as much as possible. This gave him a better opportunity to use his famous armlocks.

Jack Conway

When Lee would get Sonnenberg in a bad position, the latter would wiggle under the ropes. He would remain outside of the battle area as long as possible. Twice Referee Charley Donnell tolled the count of nine before Gus got back into action.

Sonnenberg finally nailed Wykoff with two fierce tackles. The second tackle sent Lee part ways through the ropes. He was groggy when he resumed wrestling and was tipped over on his shoulders by another tackle. The fall was scored in 32 minutes.

Wykoff went on the defensive when wrestling was resumed. He relied upon armlocks. Sonny took his time, watched for an opening and scored the winning fall with a flying tackle in 11 minutes.

Nick Lutze Wins From George Vassell

Nick Lutze of Southern California, making his first Boston appearance since he was injured in his match with Ed George, scored a spectacular victory over George Vassell, Greek heavyweight. Lutze won in 24 minutes 10 seconds with his famous reverse body fall.

It was a hard, bitter match. The rivals disregarded the rules of wrestling and at times stood toe to toe and punched it out.

Vassell was first to start the fistic tactics, but found Lutze was more than his equal in this respect. Before scoring with the winning fall, Lutze backed Vassell into a corner, where he barraged with both hands to the head and body. He then counted with a reverse back fall.

Morelli Wins in Debut as Wrestler

At Morelli, Boston College football star, defeated Rex Smith of Michigan in his bow as a wrestler. Al scored the winning fall in 7m. A flying tackle gave him the honors.

Nick Lutze and Pat McKay have been signed to clash in the feature bout at Bowser's show at the Arena next Thursday night. George Calza and Morelli will appear on the same card against opponents to be picked by Bowser.

TONY'S TITLE WILL NOT BE AT STAKE

TEN ROUNDS
Tony Canzoneri, world champion lightweight, vs. Sammy Fuller, Boston.

SEVEN ROUNDS

FIVE ROUNDS
Lad Abella, Philippines, vs. Henry Janco, Lawrence.
Werter Arcelli, Italy, vs. Patsey Renza, Brockton.
Sammy Farber, West End, vs. Pete Herman, Roxbury.

FOUR ROUNDS
Pat Munro, East Boston, vs. Frank Herlihy, Lynn.

By RINGSIDE

They are going to toss Tony Canzoneri, world's lightweight champion, in with Sammy Fuller of the North End at the Boston Garden tonight.

The bout is billed for ten frames, but if Canzoneri and Fuller are to be believed, will not last that long. Each states he will slam his opponent for a loop inside of the limit.

It will be Canzoneri's first pro appearance in a Boston ring. He battled here as an amateur, but in those days was just another fighter.

Starting as a bantamweight, Canzoneri has kept packing on weight and is now a full fledged lightweight. He furnished the high spot of his career when he chilled Al Singer in a bout for the world's lightweight crown.

You will like Canzoneri's style of ring warfare. He keeps going forward at all times, punching with both stokes. He is fast and shifty and can score a knockout wallop from any angle.

Fuller also has an aggressive style. Since getting up around 135 pounds, Sammy has been punching like a middleweight. He feels that if he can score with one of his famous left hooks tonight that he will knock Canzoneri out.

In his last Boston start, Fuller stopped Bruce Flowers of New Rochelle, N. Y.

Canzoneri's Title Will Not Be at Stake

Canzoneri's title will not be at stake as Fuller has agreed to weigh in above the lightweight limit of 135 pounds. Sammy was a fraction of a pound above 135 pounds in his last two Boston matches.

In the event Fuller should win tonight, he will post a forfeit with the New York Athletic Commission for a match with Canzoneri at the lightweight limit.

The Garden tonight will try an innovation when the semifinal bout will be a seven-rounder, and three of the prelims five session affairs. There will also be a four-round match.

Wolff and Piazza to Swap Blows

Jack Conway Picks Canzoneri to Win

NEW MOUND

REGULATION WILL HELP RUNNERS

By JOE CASHMAN

Pensacola, Fla., March 6—For the second time in as many seasons. American League hurlers must learn to pitch all over again this spring.

A year back, they had to acquire a brand new motion, one that required a complete halt between windup and delivery under penalty of having a balk called.

Now, in throwing to a base to catch a runner off, they must put one foot forward in the direction of the bag before they let the ball go or a balk will be declared.

Manager John Collins of the Sox doesn't believe that the revised rule as set down by President E. F. Barbard of the American League in a communication which Bob Quinn read to the players, yesterday, means what it says, but until he is positive about it, he is going to have his pitchers practice the new style, starting today.

Collins thinks that it means that a pitcher must put out his foot in the direction he intends to throw as he is throwing.

Otherwise, the pilot contends, the hurlers may as well inform base runners that they are going to try to pick 'em off.

But we think the rule does mean what it says. It has long been a rule that a pitcher had to step towards a bag as he was throwing, and if that it what the new rule means it isn't a new rule at all.

What's more, Barnhard emphasizes the words "step first" throughout his communication, which explains several other rule changes also. The 1930 ball was ordered to increase base running, but it didn't.

The purpose of this new rule is the same. It ought to allow base runners to get a bigger lead than ever before, but if the ball remains as lively as it was, base running will still remain a lost art.

Some Rules of Game Appear Ridiculous

Some of the new rules should help the game. Others are rather ridiculous. The one about a hit out of the players' field being judged fair or foul on where it leaves the field instead of where it disappears from view is a good one.

So are the ones which compel one umpire to be on the field an hour before game time to see that players don't practice where spectators might get hurt, that players must not laugh and jeer at rivals, and that all members of the team at bat must be seated on the bench at all times except the batter, the one next at bat, the coaches and base runners.

The one which orders players always to be attired in baseball uniforms is rather childish. The average fan isn't a bit interested in the haberdashery side of baseball. Another which forbids players throwing the ball to anybody after the last out will not do baseball any good unless all the magnates interpret it as Quinn does.

He has ordered his payers to give the ball to the first youngster that reaches them after a game.

There has been a tendency in baseball of late years to ignore the children more and more. That's a very bad practice.

Give the kids all the breaks possible, for they are the fans and players of tomorrow, and if you sour them on the game the time will come when the pastime will be in grave danger of extinction.

Bring 'Em

By Frank Buck W

border by special permission to make the installation had completed their task, they were hustled out of the country. Only one was allowed to rem[ain], the engineer in charge of the plant, and he is as carefully watched as if he were constantly plotting to run away with his royal master's favorite wife or to carry off on his back the wall of Himalayas which gave Nepal the greatest natural fortifications in the world.

On May 20 of that year I sailed for Hong Kong, on the first leg of one of the most important collecting trips I have ever undertaken. While the Nepan expedition for the Indian rhinos was my big objective, I also had other important orders. The St. Louis Zoo had commissioned me to secure for them a collection of Indian waders, cranes, storks, flamingoes, also some gobbons and anteiope. Then there was an order for a whole zoo which I had contracted for with the city of Dallas. I had spent three days in Texas, not long before I sailed, consulting with the Dallas authorities. I outlined plans for a modernste size zoo, naming a complete list of animals and birds with which to stock it and making suggestions as to cages, pens and paddocks. I left them with a contract to deliver within one year's time about three hundred of birds, mammals and reptiles.

I also had an order from Al G. Barnes, the circus man, for three elephants, two tigers, two tapirs and two orangutans.

The New York Zoo, in addition to the Indian rhino, had commissioned me to get a pair of snow leopards, a pair of markhor goats and a few smaller animals. Philadelphia, too, had not confined its order to the rhino, my supplementary commission for Dr. Penrose being for a pair of snow leopards, one orang-utan and a pair of binturongs.

OTHER ORDERS

I also had a few smaller orders. I merely mention these additional orders to give you an idea of the extent of the zoo business had developed and the scale on which I was operating. In the chapter I shall recount myself to the expedition into Nepal for the rhinos.

My diary reveals that I arrived in Singapore on the 28th of June. There I made preliminary arrangements for the trapping, and, in some cases, the purchase of the specimens I was after. Then I sailed for Calcutta.

At Calcutta I had a stroke of good luck. One of the many inquiries designed to help me discover some one who could be helpful in getting me on the right side of the Maharajah of Nepal resulted in the information that General Kaiser Shum Shere, a nephew of the Maharajah, was in town. He had come down from Khatmandu in his official capacity and had established a sort of Nepalese headquarters in Middleton Row. In the Indian social section of Calcutta, where he had taken a large house for the season.

I had to get an introduction to this Nepalese prince; this was obvious. Various schemes passed into my head. I finally hit upon a very simple plan that involved an old friend of mine, a lady of considerable social standing who lived in Calcutta. I was fairly sure that if I asked her to invite General Shum Shere for tea and introduce me among those invited, she would do so.

TEA PARTY ARRANGED

She cheerfully fell in with my plans and the tea was arranged.

Shum Shere proved to be a dapper little man of about 35, with a dapper little beard. He was neatly attired in white flannel trousers and a tweed coat. When one remembers how many native princes of all sorts and varieties in that part of the world never miss an opportunity to deck themselves out like musical comedy field marshals on the grand finale when the king enters, you will realize how agreeably surprised I was on finding General Shum Shere to be an unpretentious, businesslike sort.

Lawrence Golfer Second in Standing

Hamilton, Bermuda, March 6 (Delayed) (AP)—J. W. Yulle of Montreal led the qualifying field in the men's amateur golf championship at Belmont Manor yesterday with a 74.

His card was two strokes better than that of J. H. Eaton, of Lawrence, Mass. Eaton scored a 34 going out to Yulle's 37 but could do no better than 42 coming back, while the Montreal player continued his steady pace to match his first nine total.

of Scorpio. Hank flushed with sudden rage. "What are you trying to insinuate?" he demanded, hotly ignoring the other's banteringly manner. "I'm nuts about that dame and we're going to get married. Don't make any cracks about her."

"No offense, Hank," he declared, and, quickening his pace entered the steak house ahead of the other man.

"Hello, Scorpio, congratulations!" he greeted the gang leader. Then, turning to the Gouger, "Row about an interview with the big intellectual heavy of Center?" Mimosli grinned and indicated a private booth. Hank approached Scorpio.

"Ah! My old pal Hank!" greeted Scorpio, as Newton stepped in from an adjoining booth. Hank nodded coldly. "Hello, Slaughterhouse," he answered.

Scorpio frowned. The name "Slaughterhouse" did not please him any more. He opened his mouth for a hot retort, when Newton, with a sign, silenced him.

"Mr. Scorpio," Newton remarked suavely, with a very slight accent on the "Mr.," "might care to say a few words about the Centro election."

Hank looked the lawyer over, then turned to Scorpio.

"What's on your mind, Slaughterhouse?" he asked contemptuously.

Again rage flared within Scorpio. He'd never liked Hank since that night of the Franks killing. The reporter, he felt, had tried to railroad him to jail then. He had long sensed an enmity between them—and was jealous of the newspaperman's attentions to Anne. Once more a frown suffused his face, and an angry retort rose to his lips, to be bitten back at a warning glance from the cold eyes of Newton.

Bribe Offered

"Er—well—Come inside," he suggested, indicating one of the booths in the restaurant. Wonderingly, Hank followed him, as Newton watched. the shadow of a smile on his face. Newton, it was easy to see, had directed the move, whatever it was.

Inside the booth, Scorpio drew from his pocket a thin flat package.

"I like all you newspaper boys," remarked the gang ruler, "and you and Carl have been mighty fine to me, from the time I didn't succeed in nothing up to now, when I'm getting up in the world. So I want to show you my appreciation—and here is a little present for you—a remember me by."

He paused for effect, then handed the package over and watched as the newspaperman untied it.

Inside the case was an elaborate carved gold cigarette case. In its center, studded with diamonds, was a monogrammed "H" and below it was engraved—

Hank looked admiringly at the handsome thing, turned it over in his hands, then curiously snapped it open. It was filled—but not with white cigarettes. The pellets packed into it were green.

He picked one out and unrolled it, then gasped in amazement.

For in the case, rolled up to resemble cigarettes in shape—were ten crisp new thousand-dollar bills!

Puzzled Frown

Hank fingered the bills for a moment with a puzzled frown, then comprehension dawned. Carefully placing the folded bill back into the cigarette case, he handed it to the dumfounded Scorpio.

"Sorry," he stated coldly, "but that's not in my line, Slaughterhouse."

Without waiting to hear the other's protestations, he stepped into the restaurant, a look of revulsion on his face. Straight to the cigar counter he strode, and confronted Anne.

Anne regarded him in amazement.

"What's the matter, Hank? Are you crazy?"

"Sure. About you, Honey. We're going to get married."

"But, Hank!"

"HERE'S THE STORY OF MY LIFE — HOPE IT WILL BE THE MEANS OF KEEPING KIDS OUT OF CRIME"
AT 2:44 HE STARTED ON HIS LAST LONG TRIP HALL TO THE DEATH CHAMBER

John Mulraney, former Roxbury boy who was executed in Sing Sing for the murder of a New York saloon-keeper, penned a warning to boys in his last hours on earth.

hand in that killing. Never. dark, as they charged. I had no gun. Even if I was tried, the judge said: 'You have a bad face.' It made me feel hot under the collar. And I wouldn't say a word to my lawyer at the trial or go on the witness stand. I was under the belief that the judge and jury couldn't take any stock in my story.

"It's after 4 o'clock and my fingers are sore from writing. For it's hard for me to write. They'll be coming for me soon.

"I've done a heap of bad things. I'm sorry, of course, but it's no use to be sorry now with death only an hour away. I'll be brave all right. I can't forget that when they had that hearing about commutation that judge said he thought that I was afraid. No man likes to be locked up in this kind of a place. But I'm no coward. I'm not, then some. I'm ready."

"Happy Jack" Mulraney began his trip down the hall at 2:44 o'clock that same morning. Fourteen men were in the death cells. He called his good-bye to them. And he heard their muffled farewells. It was 3:49 when he entered the execution chamber. As he sat in the chair he said:

"Tell them I am not afraid."

Anna Field and Madeleine Doty, the "angels" of that prison, attended to his burial. Many a convict, following release, went straight through the illustrations of those two noble women.

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Shipping returned to normal today after two hectic days in which storm and tide made movements uncertain.

Damage wrought by the storm along the waterfront was confined to the sidewalks along Atlantic and Northern ayes.

The fishing fleet has started out again to the grounds after being tied up during the period of the northeast gale and blizzard.

STEAMER FOULS TUG

A scow was damaged and another set adrift, when the S. S. Lillian Luckenbach bound out from Boston, Philadelphia, and New York, for Los Angeles and San Francisco. She scraped alongside the tug Woodma., bound out of the harbor for New York which was towing the scows. The steamer was undamaged, and went on her way.

NEW ENGLAND APPLES

Apple exports from the port of Boston have been greater than from any other American port, reports of the International Apple Association in Spokane show. The apple shipments over last year thus far this season reveal a total of 97,080 packages as compared with 4892 packages for the same period a year ago.

Liberalism in Business

New Ideas Driving Out Old Fogyism

Business success is no longer promoted by hostility to new ideas. On the contrary, old fogyism constitutes a barrier to high advancement.

The ferment of war and readjustment has to a degree turned one-time radicals into reactionaries and has stirred up liberalism in hitherto ultra conservative business quarters.

By way of illustration, John Spargo, former Socialist, has characterized as reactionaries old line Socialists who have clung tenaciously to pre-war dogmas.

In this world of rapid flux, social doctrines, as well as technical methods, must change to conform to new conditions.

The most remarkable shift is in the viewpoint of modern business, which has begun to repudiate the older fashion of antagonism to conscious progress.

New inventions in the laboratory are changing business so rapidly that large companies are beginning to seek chief executives with open minds, who are hospitable to new ideas.

Accordingly, men of culture, who in an earlier era would have despised trade, now hold important executive posts.

Since well-managed concerns have chosen to base operations on scientific principles, instead of intuitive, rule of thumb methods, they need a leadership which has a respect for facts, rather than mere traditions.

With workers necessarily separated from the boss in big companies, wise management has striven to establish modern systems, which give expression to legitimate human longings of employes.

To an increasing extent the direction of business corporations is passing to men of a more progressive bent. Men like Owen D. Young, Henry Bruere, Frank A. Vanderlip, Walter S. Gifford, Myron C. Taylor and Henry S. Dennison have brought to business a modern social philosophy.

In our present day democracy, business seems to dwarf even politics in its influence on the welfare of the common man.

It would be a fortuitous and happy circumstance if more pivotal corporations would pass from the direction of hard-boiled, old-fashioned exploiters into the hands of enlightened leaders, who regard business as an opportunity for public service as well as a means of personal gain.

Homeward Bound

"Bon Voyage!"

A shipment of 299 undesirable aliens has just arrived at Ellis Island, New York. They will soon be released from the detention wards there.

Fortunately for the United States, these 299 are not westbound, but eastbound. They are being sent AWAY from America, back to the lands they came from.

They object, strenuously, to being deported. They would prefer to stay here, to take advantage of America's traditional hospitality toward foreigners, to add to our crime problem, to be a burden on the community.

Twenty of them, by the way, are violently insane. Some are confined in straitjackets, others are shackled hand and foot.

Most of the 299 slipped into America illegally. They are samples of the thousands who have done that in past years, and who, for one reason or another, still are here.

REAL Americans—whether born here or abroad; whether descendants of those who came here in the Mayflower or those who came in the steerage—will be glad to see these 299 go. Our land is well rid of them. They, and others like them, constitute a large share of our unemployment problem, of our crime problem and of our dope problem. They jam our breadlines, our insane asylums, our prisons. Their illegal vote helps to maintain some of our crooks in public office. They are a menace to everything worth while that America represents.

They contaminate our national life. The money we spend in trying to educate them is wasted. The Americanization programs we have tried on them are futile. Good citizens cannot be made out of confirmed criminals or congenital lunatics. A great nation cannot be built up out of dregs such as these.

Rail vs. Motor Truck

The railroads and their employes in New England are marshaling their combined forces against the competition of the motorbus and truck.

Any effort the railroads make to drive out the independent competitors will not be so fruitful in the long run as the efforts they can make to improve their own service itself and by the supplementing advantage of motor transportation.

In this era of classical and conventional efficiency and uniformity it is a wonder that the transportation engineers have not produced a universal motortruck sedan.

The sedan, loaded with small freight, could be lifted by crane off the wheels of the truck, deposited in a flatcar, transported by rail across New England to its place of destination and then placed upon the uniform base of another truck and motored to the consignee.

There would be fewer trucks cluttering the highways and the railroads would be getting much or some of the business they claim to be now deprived of by "unfair" competition.

Words of the Wise Men

The most happy man is he who knows how to bring into relation the end and beginning of life. —Goethe.

It is not money, nor is it mere intellect, that governs the world; it is moral character; it is intellect associated with moral excellence. —Woolsey.

Hope Williams walks like a stage bowery girl. And real Bowery guts walk like anyone else. So many blondes resemble Ann Harding. The Rev. Randolph Ray of the Little Church. Few surpass Theodore Dreiser in expressing a solitary genius. Phoebe Foster resembles Ethel Barrymore.

George S. Kaufman is the easiest man on the Rialto to caricature. The 6th avenue shooting galleries desolated. What became of the sale of the Hippodrome? Phil Baker's roguish humor. Upton Sinclair's newest book indicts civilization again, the old chronic indicter.

Barney Gallant shaves three times a day. A tea room featuring parchesi. If they revive crokinole, I'll be furious. The old time theatrical costume shop has passed. Gloomy, romantic spots.

In a lower Broadway skyscraper are many firms of international engineers, constructors and financiers of public works. Here men at glass-topped desks deal with devastating world drama. Often a young engineer is told at 4 p. m. to go up the gangplank at midnight for the other side of the world.

Always the air of suppressed excitement. Each hour may bring high adventure. These firms stretch railroads across the Andes and Persian deserts. They dig tunnels through impassable mountains, explore lost mines and restore lost cities.

The personnel includes those who have touched almost inaccessible spots in Asia, crossed India from Karachi to Bombay to Madras to Ceylon before reaching 30 and are still considered mere strippings who have seen very little of the world.

The most exciting post in such firms is expediting manager. Without leaving his desk he routes engineers to outer rims of the globe. He knows instantly the condition of the road from Bakhu to Teheran, the route from Lima to Santiago, or whether transports are running this month or next from Damascus to Bagdad. They are walking Baedekers who in many instances never stepped off Manhattan Island. Yet they know the queer customs, currency, the geography, main streets and best hotels from some whistle stop on the dinky Ugandi to Stockholm.

There is a difference about the seasoned traveler difficult for us stay-at-homes to grasp. A year ago I ran across a traveled acquaintance leisurely strolling and puffing a pipe on West 53rd street. We chatted awhile, suddenly he looked at his watch and said he must be off to pack. He was sailing at 10 for a remote post in Persia, to be gone two years. I twitched about on the pillow in the wide-eyed manner of the gold fish all night, just thinking about it.

In Atlantic crossings I have frequently in ship lounges been thrown into the company of those highly professional tweedy voyagers with Sherlock Holmes dee-stalker caps. They refer casually to remote places they visit—places the pronunciation of which you often wondered about. Their worldliness soon makes you feel your European jaunt is somewhat like a dinky ferryboat ride to Staten Island.

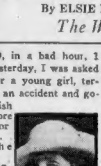
Listen, World! -:- Fumbling

By ELSIE ROBINSON

The Weaver

LONG AGO, in a bad hour, I wrote this. Yesterday, I was asked to reprint it for a young girl, terribly injured in an accident and going blind. I wish I might do more — for her — for all of us . . working in the dark.



Elsie Robinson

It is a small rag rug, hand-woven, and it is beautiful, in a simple way. The warp is that warm gray of good field soil, and through it runs a woof of green and gold, with sparks of blue and red like driftwood flame.

A lovely rug, yet there is pathos in its loveliness. The margins are not even. In several places the design has gone astray, as though the weaving fingers blundered on the loom

They did.

The one who wove was blind.

All day that weaver sits and weaves those vivid strands through the dull warp. He has a chart and numbered pegs by which he gropes his way. And so he slowly weaves within his endless night, building a thing of mingled shade and light —his brave heart singing behind darkened eyes.

But, sometimes, he forgets to sing. His fingers slip. Or he is tired and puzzled by it all—and bitter at the fate that shuts him in. And then the margins go awry and the design is marred.

So weaves the weaver—so weave I.

For I, too, work in darkness which I cannot pierce, and make a pattern which I cannot see or understand.

The loom is that set frame which holds us all—

The warp is the dull webbing of our days—

And through that warp I weave the pattern of myself . . . that pattern which, though blind, I vaguely see, but never can produce upon the loom.

Sometimes the thread runs cool and green as peace—

Sometimes it's scarlet, like a spurt of flame, when, briefly, some adventure comes my way—

Sometimes it glows with the deep gold of love—

Or purples with the agony of grief—

Or grays with fear—

Or is all grimed with sin—

And, sometimes, there's a strand that is clean white—when, for an instant, I can almost see—

Whatever comes, I weave and weave and weave.

And all I am is woven in my rug, into that pattern which I call My Life.

For days I will weave straight and feel, with pride, the shuttle smoothly pass beneath my hand—

And then my fingers slip, the plan is marred—

The threads are tangled and I cry aloud—

Rebelling at a loom I cannot see—

And a plan I cannot understand—

Yet, when the spell has passed I work again—fumbling to find the pegs that guide my hands.

Some day the rug I've woven will be done. I cannot tell how it will seem to those who see. I do not know how far I've wandered from the plan. But I am hoping that the One who gave the loom—and stretched the warp on which I've had to weave—will take the ragged product, when my day is done and say—

"She wrought some beauty, though her eyes were blind."

Capital Silhouettes

By GEORGE R. BROWN

IT IS a commentary on Congress that the only congratulations it received were for giving itself nine months leave with pay.

* * *

THE POTLICKER controversy has been raging now long enough for some of the able authorities to stop spelling it with two "k's."

IF THE Seventy-first Congress had sat in continuous session for two solid years of 365 days of 24 hours each, it would have been obliged to appropriate money from the public treasury at the rate of about $10,000 per minute to have hung up its spending record, which by a strange coincidence is just about the rate at which the taxpayers will now have to dig down.

* * *

TO GIVE those 531 Senators and Congressmen nine months leave pay will cost the taxpayers $7,982,300, but boy! What a saving that will be.

THE ONLY way the authors of this country can hope to have Congress pass the copyright bill is to move out on the farm.

Think It Over

Drawn by Hal Coffman

A straight line is not always the shortest path between two points. The "easiest way" will not always get you there the quickest. The broadest and smoothest road is not always the best.

It depends on where you are going.

If you are heading for disaster, the route to take is the one ahead—the route marked Gambling, Booze, Dope.

If your destination is Success, Health, Prosperity, then take the Common Sense detour. You may not have much company on the way, but you will reach the end of your trip many hours ahead of those that stick to the broad highway.

Children Annoy 2124 Ways

By WINIFRED BLACK

"Survey," by Eminent Doctor,

TALK ABOUT Einstein and his theories—

Dr. Mandel Sherman, director of the Child Research Center, Washington, D. C., is the real Christopher Columbus when it comes to discoveries—if you ask me.

Dr. Sherman announces that he has discovered that there are 2124 ways in which children annoy their parents.

Winifred Black

He asked a certain number of parents to keep notebooks and set down the ways in which their children annoyed them.

The parents carried notebooks around with them, and kept a record of each day of the week.

Talk about system!

Wouldn't you like to have a parent with a notebook in his hand? So interesting, so human, so kindly, so humorous, so tolerant, and so common-sensed—the whole astonishing idea.

We may think we know a little something about parents and a little more perhaps about children ourselves—we ordinary, everyday human beings who don't have to lug a notebook around to see what we see, when we want to see it.

To be sure we've every one of us had parents of our own, and a whole lot of us have had and still have children—not to mention the fact that we've all been children ourselves, sometime or other.

But did we make a survey and set down questions and answers, and have an alphabetical file and make reports and everything?

Not so it would worry you any to think about it. And how can you expect to know things unless you make a "survey?"

And what do you think the parents with the notebooks set down in those same books with so much care and precision?

Some of the parents were annoyed because their children were too slow and others were peeved because their children were entirely too quick, too sharp, too sudden about things.

Well, well, think of that.

We never heard of such a thing before did we—not until the survey was made?

Of course when little Johnny couldn't go out the door without slamming it, and it sounded like a peal of thunder—we knew it made us jump.

And we usually found some way to hint to Johnny that door slamming was not exactly what you might call "clubby."

And when little Willie persisted in leaving the door open—when "he" went out we spoke to Willie about it, and said things about being raised in a barn, or words to that effect, and Willie seemed to have no trouble in realizing that yawning doors were somehow or other a bit of an annoyance—but dear me what a relief it is to have a survey about it.

It makes us all feel so accurate and scientific, and well informed, don't you know.

But wouldn't you love to provide Willie and Johnny with notebooks and ask them to set down the various ways in which parents annoy children?

Interesting reading, for the parents—eh what?

But did we make a survey and set down questions and answers,
